BODY:

The Forum (10/3, Cole) reports, "Former Fargo businessman John Korsmo helped raise money for Rick Clayburgh's congressional campaign Tuesday night, an event some in Washington, D.C., say raises ethical questions. Korsmo is now chairman of the Federal Housing Finance Board in Washington, a presidential appointment he received about a year ago. The American Banker, an online publication of Thompson Media, said in its Tuesday edition that presidents of several Federal Home Loan Banks - whom Korsmo regulates - were invited. The reception was at the home of a lobbyist in Washington, D.C. Clayburgh is the Republican candidate opposing the re-election bid of Rep. Earl Pomeroy, D-N.D." A Clayburgh campaign spokesperson "said the National Republican Congressional Committee and the Clayburgh campaign worked up the list." One member of the Federal Housing Finance Board.Allan I Mendelowitz told The American Banker he was troubled by the event because Korsmo recently announced a new code of conduct for the Federal Housing Finance Board." Korsmo "said he cleared his involvement in the Clayburgh fund-raiser with the general counsel of his office, who also consulted with a government ethics official."
