Questions for Karl Rove from David Moorman
at Texas Monthly
2 October 2003

1. Not attributed – but do you think is it fair to characterize Dan Barlett as a wunderkind, a kind of prodigy in the world of Washington politics?

Yes

15486216

2. Do you know if Dan Barlett is among the youngest people to have Oval Office walk-in privileges?

Don't know

3. Direct quotation – After Bush's first statewide victory, Bartlett was given a position of great responsibility in the governor's office: deputy director of policy. "It was clear from the get-go that this was a person of enormous talent," says Rove. "We identified him very early, and he was sort of fought over after that" – is that accurate?

Yes

insrsid9523598 4. Direct quotation – In the context of the presidential campaign: "When Karen was on the road and Dan was in [Austin], it got hard to tell where one started and the other stopped," says Rove – is that correct?

Yes

5. No one was surprised when, after the presidential election, Hughes asked Bartlett to be her deputy – is that accurate?

Yes

CLOSE - UPConway Downing Jr.
The roll of the dice

64 When Conway "Doc" Downing Jr. '64 attended the University of Virginia Law School, he thought he was headed for a career on Wall Street. But his entrepreneurial flair took over, and he has built a career providing services for the gaming industry—servicing lottery machines, lobbying for a gaming trade association and currently exploring Internet gaming.

"As an African-American businessman trying to get ahead in the gaming industry, I enjoy the challenge and new opportunities on the horizon," he says. "Not long ago gaming was considered 'mobbed up,' and those involved in this industry could not access the capital markets and the Wall Street investment banking community."

Even by deciding to come to Andover, Downing showed his willingness to take on challenges. Growing up in Newport News, Va., he attended segregated black schools. In a South that was still grappling with integration, Downing's father, a dentist and entrepreneur himself, feared Newport News would follow the lead of Norfolk, where the white high schools, rather than integrate, were closed.

So Downing considered boarding school in New England. When he showed up at the SSAT test site—a white elementary school in Virginia—he was told it would be a violation of state law for him to sit with white students, and he was asked to move to the basement. His father angrily protested, and young Conway took the SSAT with the others.

WASHINGTON, DC 20510

The President
The White House
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

As you know, in response to a request by George Tenet, the Director of Central Intelligence, the Justice Department announced on September 29th that it was opening a preliminary criminal investigation to determine whether Administration officials disclosed the identity of a covert CIA officer to the media.

While this announcement is an acknowledgment of the importance of this matter, we continue to be deeply concerned about the failure of the Administration to treat this matter with the seriousness it demands.

Despite the grave security implications of this disclosure, your spokesperson indicated that you had no plans to conduct an internal investigation of this matter. In addition, it was indicated that you oppose the appointment of a special counsel, even though keeping the investigation in the hands of the Justice Department raises conflict of interest issues.

We regret these decisions, and we ask you, through the White House Counsel, to urge the Attorney General to reconsider his refusal to appoint a special counsel. In the meantime, in order to expedite an investigation of this case, we ask that you immediately direct your staff to take the following steps:

1. Produce a list of all senior White House officials who could have had access to relevant information regarding the identity of CIA operatives;
2. Insist that every senior staff member sign a statement that they are not responsible for disclosing the identity of the CIA employee who was exposed, and affirming that they will immediately produce any information that would help identify the person or persons responsible for the leak;

The President
October 1, 2003

3. Assign a senior attorney within the White House Counsel's Office to organize and compile relevant documents in order to ensure swift compliance with the investigation;
4. Instruct the White House Counsel to determine whether any document, electronic communication, phone log, or any other record related to this matter was destroyed or deleted between the official notification to the White House of the criminal investigation by the Department of Justice on the evening of September 29th, and the issuance approximately 12 hours later of White House Counsel Alberto Gonzalez's memorandum instructing White House staff to preserve all evidence, or at any other time prior to that notification.

In October of 2001, you stated that "...it is unacceptable behavior to leak classified information when we have troops at risk." We strongly agree. We believe it is imperative that this matter be investigated as quickly and as thoroughly as possible. Any Administration official found to be responsible in this matter should be dismissed immediately and prosecuted for their violation of Federal criminal law.

Sincerely,

Tom Daschle

The $87 billion supplemental will pass both houses. However, it will be a fight, especially during the amendments. As such, the fight will not be the passage of the legislation, but rather the attempts by Democrats and some Republicans to "pay for" the $87 billion with a repeal of the President's tax cut for the top 1% of income earners. ATR has begun the process to vigorously oppose this plan and defend the tax cuts passed into law under President Bush. Over the next two days, ATR will be launching an earned media, lobbying, and grassroots campaign to stop the amendments from watering down the President's original request.

Dear Mr. President:

I have been following very closely the events in Iraq and want to add my weight to that of the millions of Americans who choose to fight terrorism by building up a free, creative, and thriving alternative in Iraq.

I have taken much heart from the fact that some ninety percent of all Iraqi municipalities are now self-governing. The national government is still weak, but self-government begins from the ground up, in the villages, towns, and local regions, just as it did long ago in the United States. I have also been heartened by the fact that Iraqi courts staffed by Iraqis and following Iraqi law are now operating in every municipality and every region, and on matters of human rights, even on the national level. A new Iraqi currency is now coming into circulation, many months more quickly than we were able to accomplish this in Germany in 1946-47. There have been few, if any, security problems in more than ninety percent of the territory in Iraq, and nearly all the 86 American deaths we have suffered in the 152 days since May 1 have occurred in a small quadrant of Iraq northwest of Baghdad that is still tormented by Saddam's relatives and ruling elite.

Nonetheless, the people of Iraq have suffered so acutely during the last thirty years—more than a million of them taken from their terrified families, tortured and killed—that I hope the American people and their representatives will see it in their heart to extend to Iraq sufficient financial aid to set them on the road to recovery. During these thirty years, while he was glorifying himself with reckless self-indulgence, Saddam Hussein neglected the most basic necessities of the civilian infrastructure.

I look on any help we can extend to this intelligent, broadly educated and talented people partly as an act of generosity, in the well-established American tradition, but even more as an investment in creating an alternative to terror in the Middle East. Terrorism is not the answer. Liberty and solid progress for all will do far more to raise existing standards of living and future aspirations among the creative peoples of the Middle East.

The aid we give to Iraq now is an investment in what Franklin Delano Roosevelt called the Four Freedoms: freedom of speech and expression, freedom of worship, freedom from fear, and freedom from want. I strongly support such an investment.

Respectfully,

Dear Mr. President:

At this critical time in the War on Terror, it is essential that the U.S. provide maximum support for building democratic institutions in Iraq.

I deeply hope and urge Congress to provide the fullest possible funding to nurture democracy in post-Saddam Iraq.

The long-term goals of American foreign policy, including the transformation of the Middle East, may well be hindered should Congress fail to comprehend the broader implications of the appropriations debate.

Dear Mr. President:

On behalf of the thousands of families represented by Family Research Council I would like to offer our support for the initial proposal of supplemental spending for the war on terror. The freedom and security of the American people demand constant vigilance, and with strong oversight this investment will strengthen our ability to provide the military capacity needed to safeguard our families from the persistent aggressor of terrorism.

I ask that while you commit the full resources of the American people to the defense of our nation, you likewise insist upon fiscal responsibility that protects American families from unnecessary economic loss. As the economy struggles to grow and provide more jobs, the federal government must now, more than ever, demonstrate the discipline that will enable the American people to support the administration in these difficult times.

As you well know, there are many programs that currently receive billions of dollars in federal funding that are less critical than the war on terror. I ask you to offset as much of the requested supplemental spending as possible, but especially the money dedicated to non-military expenses. It is true that the political reality makes fiscal discipline difficult, but this is a political battle worth waging if we truly wish to fight for the health and future of our country. Senator Brownback's Commission on the Accountability and Review of Federal Agencies (CARFA), S. 837, would provide a vehicle by which many of these difficult political decisions could be made.

Thank you, Mr. President, for your leadership in this difficult time. You remain in our prayers as you work for peace in our nation and in the world.

Dear Mr. President:

On behalf of the Officers and the Board of The Jewish Institute for National Security Affairs, we wish to make known our support for the administration's request for $87 billion in security and reconstruction funds for Afghanistan and Iraq. While the number is eye-popping, we believe the war against terrorists and the states that harbor and support them should be the chief priority of the government of the United States.

A non-profit, non-partisan educational organization, JINSA's mandate includes active support of a strong American defense capability and close security relations between the United States and our democratic allies. We supported American efforts in the United Nations to have the Iraqi regime meet the requirements of UN resolutions following the 1991 Gulf War, and supported efforts to build a successful coalition to enforce those resolutions. The liberation of Iraq by the US-led coalition was, in our view, essential to breaking the relationship between states and terrorist organizations that threaten free countries and institutions.

We are aware of the many domestic priorities that vie for limited American resources, but we believe the future of all of our domestic priorities ultimately will be determined by American-led successes or failures in this war. We cannot be isolationist in our choices; the enemy we face is international and expansionist and has already struck at the American homeland. If Afghanistan and Iraq are not helped to establish a secure and politically moderate future, the terrorists will have reason to believe they can persevere, and we will surely face more assaults at home and abroad.

We strongly agree with your formulation at the UN General Assembly that, "First, we must stand with the people of Afghanistan and Iraq as they build free and stable countries. The terrorists and their allies fear and fight this progress above all, because free people embrace hope over resentment, and choose peace over violence."

JEWISH INSTITUTE FOR NATIONAL SECURITY AFFAIRS

President George W. Bush
30 September 2003

You also noted that, "Some of the sovereign nations of this assembly disagreed with our actions. Yet there was, and there remains, unity among us on the fundamental principles and objectives of the United Nations. We are dedicated to the defense of our collective security, and to the advance of human rights. These permanent commitments call us to great work in the world, work we must do together. So let us move forward."

We, like you, hoped that nations that were unwilling to support military operations in Iraq would be more forthcoming with assistance to the Iraqi and Afghan societies, and prepared to help meet the civilian reconstruction requirements in those places. It is in their humanitarian interest and in their long-term security interest to do so. We hope, too, that your administration will continue to seek support for reconstruction projects as well as security assistance to protect and consolidate coalition gains until the Iraqis and Afghans are able to sustain their own security and economic growth.

In the interim, and in the absence of large-scale reconstruction assistance from other countries, we in JINSA will support American efforts and American expenditures.

Respectfully,

The Honorable George W. Bush
President of the United States
The White House

Dear Mr. President:

We are writing to support your request to Congress for $87 billion in additional funds to pay for military and intelligence operations in Iraq and Afghanistan and elsewhere in the war on terror, and to help pay for the reconstruction of both nations.

Our men and women in uniform have been making tremendous sacrifices in the cause of freedom. We applaud your request to dedicate the majority of these funds ($66 billion) to give them the resources they need to succeed in their missions in Iraq, Afghanistan, and elsewhere in the war on terror.

America, under your leadership, is helping to build safe, stable, and self-governing societies in Afghanistan and Iraq which have been ravaged by decades of misrule. Allocating the remainder of the funds ($21 billion) for rebuilding these countries as soon as possible demonstrates your Administration's commitment to helping them on the road to democratic rule. In Iraq it will serve the long-term interests of the United States by bringing stability to the region. To leave the rebuilding undone after winning the war is to leave a crucial part of the job unfinished.

We urge the Congress to pass your request as soon as possible to give our troops the needed additional resources to accomplish their missions and the people of Afghanistan and Iraq the next step towards free societies.

Dear Mr. President:

I am writing in support of your request for an additional 87 billion dollars to fight the war against terror. I know the monies you have requested to support our military on the ground in Iraq, Afghanistan, and elsewhere is absolutely necessary to the defense of this nation and our allies. The remaining monies ($21 billion) are well-spent in building self-governing societies.

You can add my voice to yours in urging Congress to act quickly and positively to your request,

With the greatest respect,

SUBJECT: Support the Fiscal 2004 Defense Supplemental

On behalf of the 2.6 million members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and our Ladies Auxiliary I ask you to support the Fiscal Year 2004 Department of Defense Supplemental funding bill.

The Supplemental funding bill is needed to continue our military efforts in the war on terror, but more importantly it will provide our young men and women in the military who remain in harms way desperately needed resources to get the job done.

Congress must provide our servicemen and women the resources needed to accomplish their mission, including continued training, replacement of war-torn equipment, pay increases and when possible time off for rest.

The VFW continues to support decisive action in the war on terror - we must remain committed to peace and stability, but we must ensure that our young men and women in the military are properly supported and equipped.

I urge you to support passage of the 2004 Fiscal Defense Supplemental for our troops and for our nation.

Dear Mr. President,

We, the undersigned, are past chairmen of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations. During our tenures we worked with the respective United States administrations to promote stability and democracy, as well as to counter terrorism and extremism. Today, we stand with you and our government in the efforts to establish the conditions and create the environment to promote democracy and the rule of law in Iraq. We recognize the importance of the funds you have requested to reconstruct Iraq to achieve these goals and to support our brave troops in Iraq.

Stem Cell Science and the Preservation of Life

by George W. Bush

Yet the ethics of medicine are not infinitely adaptable. There is at least one bright line: We do not end some lives for the medical benefit of others. For me, this is a matter of conviction: a belief that life, including early life, is biologically human, genetically distinct and valuable. But one need not be pro-life to be disturbed by the prospect of fetal farming or cloning to provide spare human parts. Most Americans share a belief that human life should not be reduced to a tool or a means.

Stem cell research takes place on a slippery slope of moral concern where much biomedical research is and will be conducted. We must keep our ethical footing. Government has a clear duty to promote scientific discovery -- and a duty to define certain boundaries.

My administration supports legislative efforts to prohibit the cloning of human beings for any purpose, and also to prohibit the production of human embryos solely to be destroyed in medical research.

As we enter the new territory of modern science, the choices will only grow more difficult. The new technologies we create -- with their potential to cure disease and relieve suffering -- may well define our age. But we will also be defined by the care and sense of self-restraint and responsibility with which we took up these new powers.

Power -- even technological power -- is always judged by its ends and its means. Seeking noble ends by any means is unacceptable when life itself is in the balance.

Remarks by the President at the Dedication of the Pope John Paul II Cultural Center

March 22, 2001

We're responsible to stand for human dignity and religious freedom wherever they are denied, from Cuba to China to Southern Sudan. And we, in our country, must not ignore the words the Pope addresses to us. On his four pilgrimages to America, he has spoken with wisdom and feeling about our strengths and our flaws, our successes and our needs.

The Pope reminds us that while freedom defines our nation, responsibility must define our lives. He challenges us to live up to our aspirations, to be a fair and just society where all are welcomed, all are valued, and all are protected. And he is never more eloquent than when he speaks for a culture of life. The culture of life is a welcoming culture, never excluding, never dividing, never despairing and always affirming the goodness of life in all its seasons.

In the culture of life we must make room for the stranger. We must comfort the sick. We must care for the aged. We must welcome the immigrant. We must teach our children to be gentle with one another. We must defend in love the innocent child waiting to be born.

The center we dedicate today celebrates the Pope's message, its comfort and its challenge. This place stands for the dignity of the human person, the value of every life and the splendor of truth. And, above all, it stands, in the Pope's words, for the "joy of faith in a troubled world."

Remarks to the Nation on Stem Cell Research

August 9, 2001

I also believe human life is a sacred gift from our Creator. I worry about a culture that devalues life, and believe as your President I have an important obligation to foster and encourage respect for life in America and throughout the world. And while we're all hopeful about the potential of this research, no one can be certain that the science will live up to the hope it has generated.

Eight years ago, scientists believed fetal tissue research offered great hope for cures and treatments -- yet, the progress to date has not lived up to its initial expectations. Embryonic stem cell research offers both great promise and great peril. So I have decided we must proceed with great care.

As a result of private research, more than 60 genetically diverse stem cell lines already exist. They were created from embryos that have already been destroyed, and they have the ability to regenerate themselves indefinitely, creating ongoing opportunities for research. I have concluded that we should allow federal funds to be used for research on these existing stem cell lines, where the life and death decision has already been made.

Leading scientists tell me research on these 60 lines has great promise that could lead to breakthrough therapies and cures. This allows us to explore the promise and potential of stem cell research without crossing a fundamental moral line...

National Sanctity of Human Life Day, 2002

January 18, 2002

This Nation was founded upon the belief that every human being is endowed by our Creator with certain "unalienable rights." Chief among them is the right to life itself. The Signers of the Declaration of Independence pledged their own lives, fortunes, and honor to guarantee inalienable rights for all of the new country's citizens. These visionaries recognized that an essential human dignity attached to all persons by virtue of their very existence and not just to the strong, the independent, or the healthy. That value should apply to every American, including the elderly and the unprotected, the weak and the infirm, and even to the unwanted.

Thomas Jefferson wrote that, "[t]he care of human life and happiness and not their destruction is the first and only legitimate object of good government." President Jefferson was right. Life is an inalienable right, understood as given to each of us by our Creator.

President Jefferson's timeless principle obligates us to pursue a civil society that will democratically embrace its essential moral duties, including defending the elderly, strengthening the weak, protecting the defenseless, feeding the hungry, and caring for children -- born and unborn. Mindful of these and other obligations, we should join together in pursuit of a more compassionate society, rejecting the notion that some lives are less worthy of protection than others, whether because of age or illness, social circumstance or economic condition. Consistent with the core principles about which Thomas Jefferson wrote, and to which the Founders subscribed, we should peacefully commit ourselves to seeking a society that values life -- from its very beginnings to its natural end. Unborn children should be welcomed in life and protected in law.

President's Remarks to March for Life Participants

January 22, 2002

Everyone there believes, as I do, that every life is valuable; that our society has a responsibility to defend the vulnerable and weak, the imperfect and even the unwanted; and that our nation should set a great goal that unborn children should be welcomed in life and protected in law.

Abortion is an issue that deeply divides our country. And we need to treat those with whom we disagree with respect and civility. We must overcome bitterness and rancor where we find it and seek common ground where we can. But we will continue to speak out on behalf of the most vulnerable members of our society.

We do so because we believe the promises of the Declaration of Independence are the common code of American life. They should apply to everyone, not just the healthy or the strong or the powerful. A generous society values all human life. A merciful society seeks to expand legal protection to every life, including early life. And a compassionate society will defend a simple, moral proposition, life should never be used as a tool, or a means to an end. These are bedrock principles...

Remarks by the President on Human Cloning Legislation

April 10, 2002

Advances in biomedical technology must never come at the expense of human conscience. As we seek what is possible, we must always ask what is right, and we must not forget that even the most noble ends do not justify any means.

Science has set before us decisions of immense consequence. We can pursue medical research with a clear sense of moral purpose or we can travel without an ethical compass into a world we could live to regret. Science now presses forward the issue of human cloning. How we answer the question of human cloning will place us on one path or the other.

Our children are gifts to be loved and protected, not products to be designed and manufactured. Allowing cloning would be taking a significant step toward a society in which human beings are grown for spare body parts, and children are engineered to custom specifications; and that's not acceptable.

I believe all human cloning is wrong, and both forms of cloning ought to be banned, for the following reasons. First, anything other than a total ban on human cloning would be unethical. Research cloning would contradict the most fundamental principle of medical ethics, that no human life should be exploited or extinguished for the benefit of another.

Yet a law permitting research cloning, while forbidding the birth of a cloned child, would require the destruction of nascent human life.

This is a diverse coalition, united by a commitment to prevent the cloning and exploitation of human beings.

I know we can achieve great things. We can make the world more peaceful, we can become a more compassionate nation. We can push the limits of medical science. I truly believe that we're going to bring hope and healing to countless lives across the country. And as we do, I will insist that we always maintain the highest of ethical standards.

President Speaks at 30th Annual March for Life on the Mall

January 22, 2003

And the March for Life upholds the self-evident truth of that Declaration -- that all are created equal, given the unalienable rights of life, and liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. And that principle of America needs defenders in every place and every generation.

In our time, respect for the right to life calls us to defend the sick and the dying, persons with disabilities and birth defects, and all who are weak and vulnerable. And this self-evident truth calls us to value and to protect the lives of innocent children waiting to be born.

Dear Mr. Rove:

I am writing to invite you and a guest to the premiere of the new HBO documentary, Terror in Moscow, at the Renaissance Mayflower Hotel on Tuesday, October 7, 2003. The event will begin with a reception at 6:30 p.m., followed by a screening of the film at 7:00 p.m. and dinner and discussion at 8:00 p.m. The premiere is co-sponsored by HBO and The Nixon Center.

Terror in Moscow tells the inside story of last year's mass hostage-taking by Chechen terrorists at a Moscow theater. This powerful and riveting film is built around rare video footage taken by the terrorists and emotional first-person accounts of the two and one-half day siege from several of its survivors. The film will be broadcast on HBO on October 23, the one-year anniversary of the tragic event.

The discussion following the screening will include comments by Larry C. Johnson, CEO of BERG Associates and former Deputy Director of the State Department's Counter Terrorism Office; Anatol Lieven, Senior Associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and author of Chechnya: Tombstone of Russian Power; and Dimitri K. Simes, President of The Nixon Center.

Please RSVP by returning this fax to 202-887-5222 or by calling the Center's automated response line at 202-887-0362 by Friday, October 3. Please be sure to include the name of your guest, if applicable. For further information, please call Katie Hochstetler at 202-887-1000. We regret that this invitation is not transferable.
