November 24, 2003

Dear Mr. Cousins,

Thank you for the postcard showing your support for putting troops on the U.S. border. I appreciate hearing your ideas.

What happened on May 14th, 2002, was a terrible tragedy. The Department of Homeland Security is working diligently to ensure that incidents like this do not happen.

However, the Posse Comitatus Act of 1878 precludes active military personnel from enforcing any civilian law, including immigration law.

The Department of Homeland Security's Bureau of Customs and Border Protection (CBP) is committed to ensuring the safety of all Americans by continuously watching our borders to deter, detect and prevent threats to our nation. Under its "Project Shield America," CBP is combating international terrorism and protecting the American public by preventing the introduction of weapons of mass destruction into our country and stopping international terrorists and criminal organizations from obtaining WMD materials.

In 2002, Customs processed 130 million vehicles, trucks, aircraft, boats, and vessels for a total of 415 million pedestrians and passengers. While processing these individuals, Customs staff seized 6.4 million rounds of ammunition, more than 39,000 firearms, and arrested 12,570 people.

To assist in these efforts, on October 1, 2003, the President signed into law the first appropriations bill for the Department of Homeland Security. This bill provided $41 million for the hire of new border patrol agents, $35.2 million for an air surveillance wing, and $330 million for the US VISIT system which provides the capability to record the entry and exit of non-US citizens into and out of the US.

U.S. should be consistent in every instance

CBP is continuously watching our borders to deter, detect, and prevent threats to our nation. The President is confident in the CBP's ability to get the job done.

Thanks for writing.

Sincerely,

Karl Rove
