March 11, 2004

The Honorable George W. Bush
President of the United States
1600 Pennsylvania Ave.
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

It is my pleasure to invite you to the official 50th Anniversary celebration of the Brown v. Board of Education decision in Topeka, Kansas on May 17, 2004. This unique event will not only highlight this historic civil rights case but will also include the official grand opening of the Brown v. Board of Education National Historic Site.

I would be honored to have you join the Rev. Oliver Brown family, namesake of the Brown case, national and state dignitaries in celebrating the 50th anniversary of this momentous decision, which comprised school desegregation cases from Delaware, Kansas, South Carolina, Virginia, and Washington, D.C. The celebration will be held at the historic Monroe Elementary School, which was one of four segregated schools in Topeka during the struggle for school desegregation. In addition, on May 17, we will be officially re-opening the Monroe Elementary School, as the Brown v. Board of Education National Historic Site, which will continue to educate the public regarding one of the most influential cases in American history.

Attached, you will find the save-the-date flyer for the May 17th event, and an article detailing the commemoration of the Brown v. Board of Education decision. Should you need additional information, I would be happy to personally speak with you concerning this momentous event. Please contact La Rochelle Young, of my staff, at (202) 224-3483.

I look forward to working with you in order to celebrate this historic case that ended school segregation in America.

Sincerely,

Sam Brownback
United States Senator

Brown v. Board of Education

Caste, Culture and the Constitution

BY ROBERT J. COTTROL, RAYMOND T. DIAMOND AND LELAND B. WARE

REVIEW BY SANFORD LEVINSON

Perhaps the most valuable lesson taught by the lawyer-historian authors of this fine book is that one cannot begin the story of Brown and the other school cases (including a separately decided case, Bolling v. Sharpe, that concerned the Washington, D.C. school system) in the early 1950s, when the cases were actually filed. Instead, one must properly go back to the very beginnings of American history and the institution of race-based chattel slavery.

Looking at race in America

The first four chapters, therefore, are a capsule history of race in America, including, of course, slavery and the attempt to maintain racial subordination following the formal demise of slavery in 1865. But we also read of the rise of "scientific racist" thought in the late 19th century and the popularity of D.W. Griffith's viciously racist "The Birth of a Nation," one of Virginia-born Woodrow Wilson's favorite movies. Similarly, the origins of reform give the lie to critiques of racialist "science" in the 20th century and, of course, the response to the ultimate extension of racism in Nazi Germany (and, after World War II, the need to respond to Communist challenges around the world to American racism). Credit must also be given to Jackie Robinson's integration of what was still "America's National Pastime" in 1947, as well as Harry Truman's courageous decision in 1948 to integrate the armed forces (over the opposition of the Joint Chiefs of Staff) and his subsequent victory in that year's election even though much of the "Solid South" defected to the Dixiecrat candidacy of Strom Thurmond.

The heart of the book details the specifics of the various cases and their path to the United States Supreme Court. The Court in fact first heard the case in 1953 and ordered re-argument when it became clear that there was, at best, only a 5-4 majority for invalidating school segregation. Between the original argument and re-argument occurred the death of Chief Justice Fred Vinson, who was skeptical about the arguments Thurgood Marshall made in behalf of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, and his replacement by Earl Warren, who was far more sympathetic. And, for better or worse, Felix Frankfurter, the apostle of "judicial restraint," was able to broker an agreement among the justices whereby their 1954 decision declaring school segregation to be unconstitutional was followed by a 1955 decision declaring that rectification need occur only "with all deliberate speed."

Putting Brown in context

The year 2004 will be the 50th anniversary of Brown, and many books will no doubt be published about the case. Few, if any, will do a better job of providing an overview of what many view as the most important single Supreme Court decision of the 20th century. Noted historian Ira Berlin has called this "a splendid primer," which is exactly right. In 272 well-written pages, Cottrol, Diamond, and Ware enable the reader not only to understand the specifics of Brown, believed by many analysts to be the single most important judicial decision of the 20th century, but also to place it in its full factual acontext, which begins in the 17th century and, indeed, goes forward to 2003. 272 PAGES • 6" X 9"

Mr. Karl Rove
Presidential Campaign for George W. Bush

Dear Mr. Rove,

I have already faxed a letter directly to the President regarding this.

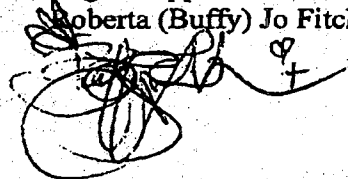

I have been given your name as someone who can help. My pastor, Dino M. Gentile, is in federal prison right now and has been for several years. His sentence is one that will have him incarcerated until he is over 90 years of age. I truly believe, and many others with me, that he does not belong there, that he belongs here with his amazing wife, his two wonderful daughters and his faithful congregation!

He has spent his time so far not feeling sorry for himself, but instead starting bible study groups and helping his inmates' lives change for the better.

I, along with literally thousands of others am beseeching our President for mercy, and for our precious friend, Pastor, husband and father to be pardoned

If you could assist us in bringing this to Mr. Bush's attention, so many lives would be blessed immeasurably.

In great appreciation,
Roberta (Buffy) Jo Fitch

Dear Mr. President,

In all seriousness and respect I write this letter to you. Pastor Dino Gentile needs to go home! He is in federal prison, and has spent the last several years building up trust among his authorities and his peers by holding services for all and changing lives.

I understand it is in your authority as President of the United States to give pardon to a federal prisoner. You know that our God is a merciful God. To be perfectly honest, if I were put to the test and asked, "Do you believe this man is guilty as charged?" Ultimately, my answer is "No, your honor." In my years of knowing him as my churches' pastor, his truthful counseling has brought my husband and I through near divorce, through the infant death of our second child, Jordan Mari, and with wisdom and generosity has over and over again showed himself a man devoted to seeking and following a Godly life.

I praise God for the lives he has helped, in Jesus name, to change through his service and council while serving time in prison, but I diligently pray that he be allowed to return home to his amazing wife and two daughters, and to his church.

Please give Pardon to Pastor Dino M. Gentile.

Respectfully,
Roberta (Buffy) Jo Fitch

Attached is a letter written on August 27, 2003 to the Federal Bureau of Reclamation. To date, the Bureau has not answered the question posed by the City of Folsom and this office.

Surely the Bureau is capable of answering a very simple straightforward question. Could you please assist in requiring them to do so?

Mr. John Keys, Commissioner
United States Bureau of Reclamation
1849 'C' Street, NW
Washington, DC 20240-0001

Dear Commissioner Keys:

The Bureau of Reclamation made a decision in February of this year, 18 months after the tragedy of September 11, 2001, to close the Folsom Dam Road indefinitely due to security concerns relating to a terrorist attack from a vehicle travelling over the road. Since that time, as I am sure you are aware, the effects on the Folsom community from the closure of this road have been devastating.

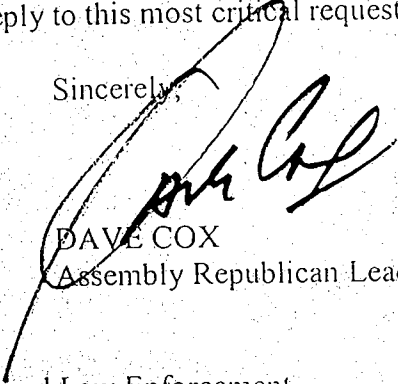

The traffic situation that the Bureau has created is nothing less than horrendous. The effects on the business community in the City of Folsom have been distressing. Long held family operated businesses are now faced with closure due to the inability of their normal customers to reach the businesses during the morning or the afternoon commuter hours. These affects are not confined to the Old Town Folsom area, but are being reported citywide. In addition, the traffic situation effects commuters from Placer and El Dorado counties as well.

The question now occurs as to what form of relief the businesses and residents of Folsom can expect from the Bureau of Reclamation. The City has requested an answer as to what assurances of protection you need to allow the road to be opened on a permanent basis or temporarily during the commuter hours.

In my opinion, you are obligated to answer this question on an immediate and urgent basis: What will it take for the Bureau of Reclamation to make a decision to open the Folsom Dam Road on a permanent or a temporary basis?

Thank you in advance for your prompt reply to this most critical request.

Sincerely,

DAVE COX

Dear Mr. President:

On behalf of George Irish, president of the Hearst Newspapers, I write to request an opportunity for George and the editors of our newspapers to pay a courtesy call when they are in town next month.

These are the same folks whom you graciously invited to the Governor's Mansion in Austin on June 7, 2000. We also had an opportunity then to meet with Karl Rove.

Of course, many of the editors are from Texas, including the new editor of the Houston Chronicle, plus Bob Rivard from San Antonio, Danny Andrews from Plainview, Odie Arambula from Laredo, and others.

The total number in the group would be about 16 folks.

We will be meeting in D.C. from Sunday, Feb. 15, through Wednesday noon, Feb. 18. We would make any changes in our schedule necessary for a chance to briefly visit you.

Best wishes to you and yours in 2004.

Dear Karl,

My client, the American Psychological Association, wanted me to pass along their sincere thanks and appreciation for your efforts regarding a provision in the Senate Medicare prescription drug bill that would have provided payments to hospitals for their training of psychologists. Although the APA's psychology training provision was not included in the final bill, the organization believes it made substantial inroads on the issue during the conference discussions and again greatly appreciates your help.

Best personal regards.

Reinforcing the Foundation Support for the Marriage Amendment

In the face of the aggressive efforts of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, the mayor of San Francisco, and others attempting to radically redefine marriage, President Bush yesterday boldly announced his unequivocal support for a federal marriage amendment.

"After more than two centuries of American jurisprudence and millennia of human experience," President Bush said, "a few judges and local authorities are presuming to change the most fundamental institution of civilization. Their action has created confusion on an issue that requires clarity."

Those activist judges make the future of the Defense of Marriage legislation very uncertain. And so the president has concluded, "Activist courts have left the people with one recourse. If we are to prevent the meaning of marriage from being changed forever, our nation must enact a constitutional amendment to protect marriage in America." Amen, and thank you, Mr. President.

In recent years, many liberal initiatives have not made it through Congress. Knowing the people won't support them, activists have resorted to the courts, and the courts have acted more and more as super-legislatures—making, rather than interpreting, law. This happened with abortion, and it's happening with same-sex "marriages." Only a constitutional amendment can stop this judicial arrogance.

The president's support is crucially important for several reasons. First, it adds muscle to the long struggle required to amend the Constitution. Second, he's defending the family. The attack on marriage is an assault on the family, the most basic building block of human culture. Marriage and procreation are inextricably linked in the moral order, but they have become decoupled by the sexual revolution. Same-sex "marriage" would tear them apart completely. This would lead to an increase in out-of-wedlock births and family dissolution, just as it has in Norway where courts imposed same-sex "marriage" on the country a decade ago.

This is a particularly critical issue to me, because in nearly thirty years of prison ministry, I've seen the disastrous consequences of family breakup. More than half the inmates in prison come from broken families. Inmates typically lack male and female role models (a dad and a mom) who are the moral influences that inform their consciences early in life. Anything that causes family breakdown will increase crime and social disorder. Only a society that has abandoned reason would knowingly undermine the family.

Anything that causes family breakdown will increase crime and social disorder.

I've asked Mark Earley, former Attorney General of Virginia and now president of Prison Fellowship, to address another issue that is vital to us that has been raised by this same-sex "marriage" drive—that is, the rule of law. So be sure to read "BreakPoint" tomorrow.

Many times on "BreakPoint" I have asked you to get involved in issues, important ones. But never has there been one as important for Christians as this. Marriage is not a partisan issue. This has to do with protecting the most fundamental institution of human life, one of the three institutions ordained by God.

If you've called before and have material about this issue, that's fine. But if you haven't, please call us today (1-877-322-5527). And then call or e-mail the White House and thank the president for his courageous stand. Urge your senators and congressman, as well, to get moving on this amendment, the most titanic struggle of the culture war to date. ■

E-mail President Bush: president@whitehouse.gov; call 202-456-1111; or write: The White House, 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C. 20500.

An Epidemic of Lawbreaking San Francisco's Gay 'Marriages'

Note: This commentary was delivered by Prison Fellowship President Mark Earley.

A little story in the Washington Post sums up what's really going in San Francisco. Reporter Evelyn Nieves had just described how San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom had decided to violate state law simply because he didn't like it: He ordered city and county officials to issue marriage licenses to homosexuals who wanted to "marry." As a result, thousands of homosexuals have defied the law, taking part in so-called "weddings."

Until today, the state attorney general of California—whose job it is to enforce state law—refused to intervene. So did Superior Court Judge Ronald Quidachay: He refused to issue even a temporary injunction stopping San Francisco's illegal marriages until he rules on a lawsuit. In effect, he's telling Californians to go ahead and break the law—well, not just any law, as a handful of protesters found out.

Last week a dozen Christians blocked the door to the San Francisco office that is issuing these illegal marriage licenses, and sheriff's deputies didn't waste any time escorting them from the building. After all, they were breaking the law!

The story illustrates what happens when government officials refuse to uphold the rule of law. We have anarchy and the beginnings of tyranny.

If that sounds extreme, consider what happens whenever pro-life citizens try to change the law. When I was attorney general in Virginia, the legislature passed a bill banning partial-birth abortions. The new law was properly debated and voted on. Nevertheless, a federal judge immediately slapped an injunction on it while the abortion lobby pursued a lawsuit. The story was the same in many other states. Judges invented reasons for shooting down every single one of them.

And the same thing happens whenever states pass parental notification laws and parental consent laws. And heaven help the pro-lifers who engage in civil disobedience at abortion clinics. They're not feted in the pages of the New York Times, as Mayor Newsom has been. Instead, they're punished under RICO statutes.

When the rule of law breaks down, citizens no longer respect authority.

To put it another way: Suppose a pro-life mayor announced he was revoking the licenses of clinics that perform abortions. How long do you think pro-abortion lawmakers would put up with that? They'd probably call in federal troops and have the mayor thrown in jail immediately. But ask lawmakers to take on the gay lobby, and they shrivel up like California raisins.

What's going on in California is truly frightening. When the rule of law breaks down, citizens no longer respect authority. In time, lawlessness becomes widespread, and people begin to long for order and safety. They look to anyone who promises to restore it—no matter what the cost in freedom. And history teaches us that they often look in all the wrong places.

Christians must understand the complexity of these arguments as events in California and around the nation unfold. An Epidemic of Lawbreaking San Francisco's Gay 'Marriages'

Note: This commentary was delivered by Prison Fellowship President Mark Earley.

A little story in the Washington Post sums up what's really going in San Francisco. Reporter Evelyn Nieves had just described how San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom had decided to violate state law simply because he didn't like it: He ordered city and county officials to issue marriage licenses to homosexuals who wanted to "marry." As a result, thousands of homosexuals have defied the law, taking part in so-called "weddings."

Until days ago, the state attorney general of California—whose job it is to enforce state law—refused to intervene. So did Superior Court Judge Ronald Quidachay: He refused to issue even a temporary injunction stopping San Francisco's illegal marriages until he rules on a lawsuit. In effect, he's telling Californians to go ahead and break the law—well, not just any law, as a handful of protesters found out.

Last week a dozen Christians blocked the door to the San Francisco office that is issuing these illegal marriage licenses, and sheriff's deputies didn't waste any time escorting them from the building. After all, they were breaking the law!

The story illustrates what happens when government officials refuse to uphold the rule of law. We have anarchy and the beginnings of tyranny.

If that sounds extreme, consider what happens whenever pro-life citizens try to change the law. When I was attorney general in Virginia, the legislature passed a bill banning partial-birth abortions. The new law was properly debated and voted on. Nevertheless, a federal judge immediately slapped an injunction on it while the abortion lobby pursued a lawsuit. The story was the same in many other states. Judges invented reasons for shooting down every single one of them.

And the same thing happens whenever states pass parental notification laws and parental consent laws. And heaven help the pro-lifers who engage in civil disobedience at abortion clinics. They're not feted in the pages of the New York Times, as Mayor Newsom has been. Instead, they're punished under RICO statutes.

To put it another way: Suppose a pro-life mayor announced he was revoking the licenses of clinics that perform abortions. How long do you think pro-abortion lawmakers would put up with that? They'd probably call in federal troops and have the mayor thrown in jail immediately. But ask lawmakers to take on the gay lobby, and they shrivel up like California raisins.

What's going on in California is truly frightening. When the rule of law breaks down, citizens no longer respect authority. In time, lawlessness becomes widespread, and people begin to long for order and safety. They look to anyone who promises to restore it—no matter what the cost in freedom. And history teaches us that they often look in all the wrong places.

Christians must understand the complexity of these arguments as events in California and around the nation unfold. We must help our neighbors understand that what's at stake is not just the sanctity of marriage, as important as that is.. What's also at stake is the future of the American experiment—of the ordered liberty and rule of law our Founders created.

The Civil Rights Case for a Federal Marriage Amendment

Mary Ann Glendon, Learned Hand Professor of Law, Harvard University

President Bush's endorsement of the need for a constitutional amendment to protect the institution of marriage should be welcomed by all Americans who are concerned about preserving democratic decision-making and assuring fair treatment to persons who are similarly situated. In Massachusetts, where the state is cutting back on programs to aid the elderly, the disabled, and children in poor families, a four-judge court majority has ruled in favor of special benefits for a group of relatively affluent households, most of which have two earners and are not raising children. What same-sex marriage advocates have tried to present as a civil rights issue is really a bid for a special preference of the type our society gives to married couples for the very good reason that most of them are raising or have raised children. And in the wake of Massachusetts case, local officials in other parts of the nation have begun to issue marriage licenses to homosexual couples in defiance of state law.

A common initial reaction to these local measures has been: "Why should I care whether same-sex couples can get married? How will that affect me or my family? Why not just live and let live?" But as people began to take stock of the implications of granting special treatment to one group of citizens, the need for a federal marriage amendment has become increasingly clear. Here are some of the reasons why, as President Bush said today, "the voice of the people must be heard."

U.S. citizens should have the opportunity to be informed, and to deliberate about, the economic and social costs of this radical social experiment. Astonishingly, in the media coverage of this issue, not a word has been said about what this new special preference would cost the rest of society in terms of taxes and insurance premiums. The Canadian government, which is considering same-sex marriage legislation, has just realized that retroactive social security survivor benefits alone would cost its taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars. There is a real problem of redistributive justice here. How can one justify treating same-sex households like married couples when such benefits are denied to all the people in our society who are caring for elderly or disabled relatives whom they cannot claim as family members for tax or insurance purposes? Shouldn't citizens have a chance to vote on whether they want to give homosexual unions, most of which are childless, the same benefits that society gives to married couples, most of whom have raised or are raising children?

If these social experiments go forward, moreover, the rights of children will be impaired. Same-sex marriage will constitute a public, official endorsement of the following extraordinary claims made by the Massachusetts judges in the Goodridge case: that marriage is mainly an arrangement for the benefit of adults; that children do not need both a mother and a father; and that alternative family forms are just as good as a husband and wife raising kids together. It would be tragic if, just when the country is beginning to take stock of the havoc those erroneous ideas have already wrought in the lives of American children, we should now freeze them into constitutional law. That philosophy of marriage, moreover, is what our children and grandchildren will be taught in school. They will be required to discuss marriage in those terms. Ordinary words like husband and wife will be replaced by partner and spouse. In marriage preparation and sex education classes, children will have to be taught about homosexual sex. Parents who complain will be branded as homophobes and their children will suffer.

Religious freedom, too, is at stake. As much as one may wish to live and let live, the experience in other countries reveals that, once these arrangements become law, there will be no live-and-let-live policy for those who differ. Though gay marriage proponents use the language of openness, tolerance and diversity, one foreseeable effect of their success will be to usher in an era of intolerance and discrimination the likes of which we have rarely seen before. Every person and every religion that disagrees will be labeled as bigots and openly discriminated against. The axe will fall most heavily on religious persons and groups that don't go along. Religious institutions will be hit with lawsuits if they refuse to compromise their principles.

Finally, there is the flagrant disregard shown by judges and local officials for the rights of citizens to have a say in setting the conditions under which we live, work, and raise our children. Many Americans--however they feel about same-sex marriage--are rightly alarmed that local officials are defying state law, and that four judges in one state took it upon themselves to make the kind of decision that our Constitution says belongs to us, the people, and our elected representatives. As one State House wag in Massachusetts put it, "We used to have government of the people, by the people, and for the people, now we're getting government by four people!" Whether one is for, against, or undecided about same-sex marriage, a decision this important ought to be made in the ordinary democratic way--through full public deliberation in the light of day, not by four people behind closed doors. That deliberation can and must be conducted, as the President stated, "in a manner worthy of our country--without bitterness or anger."

CITIZENLINK ACTION ALERT

Your Help Needed to Defend the Federal Marriage Amendment

President Bush's endorsement yesterday of a marriage-protection amendment to the U.S. Constitution was greeted with applause by family advocates -- but it has met with derision, and worse, from political and media liberals.

Today's New York Times editorialized that the Federal Marriage Amendment would "inject meanspiritedness and exclusion" into our country's founding document. To counter that ludicrous charge, a coalition of pro-family groups, including Focus on the Family, issued an open letter to the Times today.

"Gay marriage has never been a constitutional right in America or any other civilized nation," the letter stated. "No one wants to 'take away' some supposed right. It is the rogue judges who are trying to create a new right."

The importance of this message getting to the people cannot be overstated. The Times, and other liberal media, will repeat this "discrimination" charge over and over again in the next several days, hoping to turn the tide of the debate their way. Only you can help prevent that from happening.

We encourage you, this afternoon and tomorrow morning, to help spread the truth of why marriage needs to be protected in your local community. One relatively easy way to do that is to call a talk-radio station in your local market and make the case for traditional marriage.

We can help you with what you want to say -- just download a copy of the letter we've been discussing and use that as a jumping off point for making your case.

<http://www.family.org/cforum/extras/a0030937.cfm>

Then, either open your local phone book and look for news/talk stations or flip through the AM dial until you find one. Locate or listen for the dial-in comment line -- and then dial in and comment.

The battle to protect marriage as it's always been understood is going to be fierce -- and your voice, and your efforts to influence your neighbors, are going to be key to our prevailing.

Talking Points – Army's Comanche Helicopter: Feb. 24, 2004

"As the people who were doing the study... determined that what we needed to do was significant, and as we looked at our aviation budget over the years of the program, about 40 percent of that budget for aviation was devoted to Comanche. So when you looked at what we could do with those resources and the capabilities we could provide our troops within that time frame, it just became apparent that [it] was the right decision."

Acting Secretary of the Army Les Brownlee

"First of all, [it is] very important to emphasize this is an Army initiative as a result of our studies, and it is about fixing Army aviation for the future, for today and for tomorrow, not just about terminating Comanche. It's a big decision. We know it's a big decision. But it's the right decision."

Gen. Peter Schoomaker

As the result of a study initiated several months ago, the Army is restructuring and revitalizing its aviation programs. One result is the termination of the RAH-66 Comanche, an armed reconnaissance helicopter. Following are highlights of a briefing on this announcement yesterday by Les Brownlee, the acting Secretary of the Army, and Gen. Peter Schoomaker, the Army Chief of Staff.

- The Army's aviation study reflects the operational environment of the future and takes into account combat lessons learned in the Global War on Terror.
 - When the Comanche was envisioned, starting in 1983, the program made sense in the context of the threat faced at the time. The program makes less sense in today's national security environment.
 - It is not prudent for the Army or the taxpayers to spend $39 billion on a program that is not a good idea for the 21st century battlefield. (Approximately $6.9 billion has been spent thus far on Comanche.)
 - The decision must be reviewed in the context of restructuring and other Army initiatives -- including modularity and balancing the Active and Reserve components.
 - It is critical to the Army for the ongoing War on Terror and for the future that funds identified for the Comanche program remain with Army aviation. An amendment to the fiscal year 2005 budget currently before Congress will be submitted to reflect those changes.
- Roughly $14 billion allocated for the Comanche through fiscal year 2011 will be applied to other Army aviation programs.
 - The revised plan includes procuring almost 800 new aircraft -- including Apache and Blackhawk helicopters -- for the Active and Reserve component; and
 - The enhancement, upgrade, modernization and recapitalization of more than 1,400 aircraft.
 - The relevant technologies developed in the Comanche program will be applied to future aviation initiatives. Such programs include the Joint Multirole Helicopter and the Joint Airlift Aircraft.
