Dear Steelworkers,

I am pleased to report that last week I introduced a resolution urging President Bush to quickly adopt the United States International Trade Commission's recommendations to stop foreign countries from dumping steel and stealing our jobs.

The Pennsylvania State Senate did its part to "Stand up for Steel" by unanimously supporting Senate Resolution 165.

Regardless of where you call home in this great Commonwealth, the steel industry has touched and shaped your life. The legacy of our steel industry is obvious in communities like Pittsburgh, Johnstown, Steelton and Bethlehem. The mill provided jobs that welcomed new immigrants and were passed from generation to generation as an honorable family tradition. Even beyond those mill workers and their families, the steel industry energized the businesses that provided jobs for millions of other Pennsylvanians as well.

Prior to the Senate vote on my resolution, I told my colleagues that our steel industry is not the victim of a sneak attack and that we just didn't wake up one day to find freighters filled with foreign steel had invaded our country. Nor, I told my fellow Senators, should we be surprised that plants like the shuttered Bethlehem Steel works are now little more than silent monuments of a time when Pennsylvania was a worldwide leader in steel production.

Over the past four years, we have seen 28 steel companies – or about half of all active steel companies in the United States – file for bankruptcy. The harm to workers does not end when the plant closes. Witness what happened to the good people of LTV who lost their pension and healthcare for 13,000 former employees. We have stood by for too long and have done too little to stem this trend.

We must work within our system to ensure that steel makers have the benefit of a fair and equitable marketplace. It's past time for the federal government to take whatever steps are necessary to ensure this level playing field becomes an international reality. We have an opportunity to facilitate the development of a globally competitive steel industry, but only if we take action.

I have read the ITC's reports. The recommendations are lengthy and detailed. And, they ARE needed.

Quoting from the United States International Trade Commission... "...certain steel products are being imported into the United States in such increased quantities as to be a substantial cause of serious injury to the domestic industry..." The products being plate, hot-rolled sheet, cold-rolled sheet, coated sheet, hot-rolled bar, cold-finished bar and stainless steel rod, stainless steel bar, carbon and alloy steel fittings and flanges, rebar, slabs and welded tubular products.

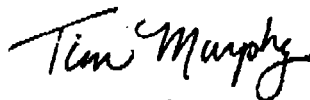

President George W. Bush says this "If you're worried about the security of the country and you become over-reliant upon foreign sources of steel, it can easily affect the capacity of our military to be well supplied. Steel is an important jobs issue; it is also an important national security issue. I am here to trumpet one of the great values of America. That's the enterprise of the American worker, the hardworking American citizens who make this economy go. And those are the steelworkers of America. I appreciate what you do for our country."

Former Governor Tom Ridge put it in clear terms when he said, "We must...act quickly...steel is an essential element of our military defenses -- from the transporting of troops to the latest smart weapon technology. When the civilian market is threatened by the glut of foreign imports, the military's capability is put at risk."

This is a serious situation. The steel industry, its workers and its families built our Commonwealth and our country. I am proud to say that the Senate of Pennsylvania stood together as the advocates of Pennsylvania's steel workers to send a clear message to Washington that it is time for the federal government to review and implement the ITC recommendations and restore fairness to fair trade.

Our steel industry can compete with anyone, and produce a better product at a competitive cost. But, we can only do that with a level playing field. I will remain by your side until we get the job done.

Thank you,

Tim Murphy
State Senator, 37th District
Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

WHEREAS, Since the steel industry crisis began in 1998, nearly 30 steel companies (approximately one half of all active steel companies in the United States) with over sixty thousand employees have filed for bankruptcy; steel and stock prices continue to plummet and illegal steel imports continue to be dumped on our shores threatening the future of the entire industry; and

Second Regular Session 112th General Assembly (2002)

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

A CONCURRENT RESOLUTION urging President Bush to act quickly on the recommendations of the United States International Trade Commission regarding the domestic steel industry.

Whereas, Steel has long been an important industry in northern Indiana and is vital to the economy of the United States;

Whereas, In recent years, the steel industry has been hit with a rise in bankruptcy filings among domestic producers, plummeting steel and stock prices, falling employment, and increased foreign control of the industry;

Whereas, Since the industry crisis began in 1998, 28 steel companies with over 60,000 employees have filed for bankruptcy;

Whereas, In recent years the steel industry has also been suffering because of increased importation of steel and iron ore products into the United States and the increased costs for retiree health care due to downsizing and restructuring of the industry during the 1980s;

Whereas, It is of utmost importance that action be taken quickly to help the domestic steel industry recover;

Whereas, Any action taken should include the creation of a government sponsored program that would provide relief from the industry's retiree legacy cost burden, primarily pension and retiree health care costs, thereby removing the most significant barrier to consolidation of a highly fragmented industry; and

Whereas, The steel industry has long been the backbone of the economy of northern Indiana and several areas in the United States, and it is vital that this industry be protected to maintain thousands of American jobs: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, the Senate concurring:

1 SECTION 1. That the Indiana General Assembly urges President
2 Bush to take swift action to implement a tariff rate of 40% for four
3 years on the full range of products where injury was found by the
4 United States International Trade Commission.

5 SECTION 2. That the Principal Clerk of the House of
6 Representatives transmit a copy of this resolution to President Bush,
7 Vice President Cheney, the Indiana Congressional delegation,
8 Governor O'Bannon, and Lieutenant Governor Kernan.

Senate of Alabama

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

Resolution

URGING PRESIDENT BUSH AND THE CONGRESS TO ACT QUICKLY ON RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION REGARDING THE DOMESTIC STEEL INDUSTRY, AND ENCOURAGING NECESSARY CONSOLIDATION AND CAPACITY REDUCTIONS IN THE INDUSTRY

By Senator McClain

WHEREAS, steel has long been an important industry in Alabama and is vital to the economy and security of the United States; and

WHEREAS, in recent years, the steel industry has been hit with a surge of foreign steel imports, a rise in bankruptcy filings among domestic producers, plummeting steel and stock prices, and massive layoffs and job losses; and

WHEREAS, twenty-eight American steel companies, with a total of more than 60,000 employees, have filed for bankruptcy since the foreign import crisis began to hit the industry in 1998; and

WHEREAS, as a result of the impact of imported steel, at least two Alabama steel firms have shut down and several others are in financial distress, bringing great hardship to Alabama communities and Alabama working families; and

WHEREAS, it is of utmost importance that action be taken quickly to help the domestic steel industry recover from the effects of the steel import crisis and the global overcapacity which exists in the industry; now therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA, BOTH HOUSES THEREOF CONCURRING, That:

(1) We urge President Bush to take swift action, in the aftermath of the recent International Trade Commission (ITC) recommendations, to implement a tariff rate on foreign steel of 40 percent for a four-year period and covering the full range of products where injury has been found by the ITC.

(2) We urge Congress to remove the principal barrier to needed consolidation within the domestic industry -- namely, employee-related obligations of certain steel companies -- by reassigning those obligations to relevant government agencies and absorbing those costs under existing government programs to the maximum extent possible.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That the Alabama Legislature transmit copies of this resolution to the President of the United States and to members of Alabama's Congressional Delegation.

I hereby certify that the above is a true, correct and accurate copy of Senate Joint Resolution No. 17, adopted by the Legislature of Alabama on January 23, 2002, Act No. 2002-049.

Dear Steelworkers,

I am pleased to report that last week I introduced a resolution urging President Bush to quickly adopt the United States International Trade Commission's recommendations to stop foreign countries from dumping steel and stealing our jobs.

The Pennsylvania State Senate did its part to "Stand up for Steel" by unanimously supporting Senate Resolution 165.

Regardless of where you call home in this great Commonwealth, the steel industry has touched and shaped your life. The legacy of our steel industry is obvious in communities like Pittsburgh, Johnstown, Steelton and Bethlehem. The mill provided jobs that welcomed new immigrants and were passed from generation to generation as an honorable family tradition. Even beyond those mill workers and their families, the steel industry energized the businesses that provided jobs for millions of other Pennsylvanians as well.

Prior to the Senate vote on my resolution, I told my colleagues that our steel industry is not the victim of a sneak attack and that we just didn't wake up one day to find freighters filled with foreign steel had invaded our country. Nor, I told my fellow Senators, should we be surprised that plants like the shuttered Bethlehem Steel works are now little more than silent monuments of a time when Pennsylvania was a worldwide leader in steel production.

Over the past four years, we have seen 28 steel companies – or about half of all active steel companies in the United States – file for bankruptcy. The harm to workers does not end when the plant closes. Witness what happened to the good people of LTV who lost their pension and healthcare for 13,000 former employees. We have stood by for too long and have done too little to stem this trend.

We must work within our system to ensure that steel makers have the benefit of a fair and equitable marketplace. It's past time for the federal government to take whatever steps are necessary to ensure this level playing field becomes an international reality. We have an opportunity to facilitate the development of a globally competitive steel industry, but only if we take action.

I have read the ITC's reports. The recommendations are lengthy and detailed. And, they ARE needed.

Quoting from the United States International Trade Commission... "...certain steel products are being imported into the United States in such increased quantities as to be a substantial cause of serious injury to the domestic industry..." The products being plate, hot-rolled sheet, cold-rolled sheet, coated sheet, hot-rolled bar, cold-finished bar and stainless steel rod, stainless steel bar, carbon and alloy steel fittings and flanges, rebar, slabs and welded tubular products.

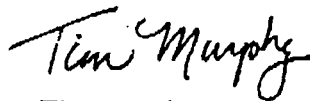

President George W. Bush says this "If you're worried about the security of the country and you become over-reliant upon foreign sources of steel, it can easily affect the capacity of our military to be well supplied. Steel is an important jobs issue; it is also an important national security issue. I am here to trumpet one of the great values of America. That's the enterprise of the American worker, the hardworking American citizens who make this economy go. And those are the steelworkers of America. I appreciate what you do for our country."

Former Governor Tom Ridge put it in clear terms when he said, "We must...act quickly...steel is an essential element of our military defenses - from the transporting of troops to the latest smart weapon technology. When the civilian market is threatened by the glut of foreign imports, the military's capability is put at risk."

This is a serious situation. The steel industry, its workers and its families built our Commonwealth and our country. I am proud to say that the Senate of Pennsylvania stood together as the advocates of Pennsylvania's steel workers to send a clear message to Washington that it is time for the federal government to review and implement the ITC recommendations and restore fairness to fair trade.

Our steel industry can compete with anyone, and produce a better product at a competitive cost. But, we can only do that with a level playing field. I will remain by your side until we get the job done.

Thank you,

Tim Murphy
State Senator, 37th District
Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

WHEREAS, The steel industry is a vital component of Ohio's

Second Regular Session 112th General Assembly (2002)

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

A CONCURRENT RESOLUTION urging President Bush to act quickly on the recommendations of the United States International Trade Commission regarding the domestic steel industry.

Whereas, Steel has long been an important industry in northern Indiana and is vital to the economy of the United States;

Whereas, In recent years, the steel industry has been hit with a rise in bankruptcy filings among domestic producers, plummeting steel and stock prices, falling employment, and increased foreign control of the industry;

Whereas, Since the industry crisis began in 1998, 28 steel companies with over 60,000 employees have filed for bankruptcy;

Whereas, In recent years the steel industry has also been suffering because of increased importation of steel and iron ore products into the United States and the increased costs for retiree health care due to downsizing and restructuring of the industry during the 1980s;

Whereas, It is of utmost importance that action be taken quickly to help the domestic steel industry recover;

Whereas, Any action taken should include the creation of a government sponsored program that would provide relief from the industry's retiree legacy cost burden, primarily pension and retiree health care costs, thereby removing the most significant barrier to consolidation of a highly fragmented industry; and

Whereas, The steel industry has long been the backbone of the economy of northern Indiana and several areas in the United States, and it is vital that this industry be protected to maintain thousands of American jobs: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, the Senate concurring:

1 SECTION 1. That the Indiana General Assembly urges President
2 Bush to take swift action to implement a tariff rate of 40% for four
3 years on the full range of products where injury was found by the
4 United States International Trade Commission.

5 SECTION 2. That the Principal Clerk of the House of
6 Representatives transmit a copy of this resolution to President Bush,
7 Vice President Cheney, the Indiana Congressional delegation,
8 Governor O'Bannon, and Lieutenant Governor Kernan.

Senate of Alabama

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

Resolution

URGING PRESIDENT BUSH AND THE CONGRESS TO ACT QUICKLY ON RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION REGARDING THE DOMESTIC STEEL INDUSTRY, AND ENCOURAGING NECESSARY CONSOLIDATION AND CAPACITY REDUCTIONS IN THE INDUSTRY

By Senator McClain

WHEREAS, steel has long been an important industry in Alabama and is vital to the economy and security of the United States; and

WHEREAS, in recent years, the steel industry has been hit with a surge of foreign steel imports, a rise in bankruptcy filings among domestic producers, plummeting steel and stock prices, and massive layoffs and job losses; and

WHEREAS, twenty-eight American steel companies, with a total of more than 60,000 employees, have filed for bankruptcy since the foreign import crisis began to hit the industry in 1998; and

WHEREAS, as a result of the impact of imported steel, at least two Alabama steel firms have shut down and several others are in financial distress, bringing great hardship to Alabama communities and Alabama working families; and

WHEREAS, it is of utmost importance that action be taken quickly to help the domestic steel industry recover from the effects of the steel import crisis and the global overcapacity which exists in the industry; now therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA, BOTH HOUSES THEREOF CONCURRING, That:

(1) We urge President Bush to take swift action, in the aftermath of the recent International Trade Commission (ITC) recommendations, to implement a tariff rate on foreign steel of 40 percent for a four-year period and covering the full range of products where injury has been found by the ITC.

(2) We urge Congress to remove the principal barrier to needed consolidation within the domestic industry -- namely, employee-related obligations of certain steel companies -- by reassigning those obligations to relevant government agencies and absorbing those costs under existing government programs to the maximum extent possible.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That the Alabama Legislature transmit copies of this resolution to the President of the United States and to members of Alabama's Congressional Delegation.

I hereby certify that the above is a true, correct and accurate copy of Senate Joint Resolution No. 17, adopted by the Legislature of Alabama on January 23, 2002, Act No. 2002-049.

Dear Mr Rove,

I am writing on behalf of Newsnight, BBC's nightly current affairs program. The program is broadcast worldwide, with significant coverage in the USA.

We would appreciate the opportunity to interview you in Washington this Tuesday, day or evening, or Wednesday any time until 5pm regarding the President and his history with Enron. Given your long familiarity with the President and these issues, we believe you are the best, most informed person to respond to questions on these matters. It is important to us to hear the President's view by someone who knows him both long and well.

We would hope to have 12 minutes of your time at the White House or, if you prefer, another location. If you will not be in Washington those days, we may be able to meet you in Texas or other location more convenient to you some time during the coming week. We will try to adjust our schedule to yours.

Note: We are aware of some reports about your own holdings of Enron securities. We have no intention of asking you about your Enron investments.

Given our time-zone differences, please call my home office phone. Feel free to call until 6pm your time (11pm London time.) Because of flight scheduling, we would appreciate hearing from you as soon as possible.

Yours,

Greg Palast

SECTION 36 – COMMUNICATIONS WITH CONGRESS AND THE PUBLIC AND CLEARANCE REQUIREMENTS

Table of Contents

36.1	Confidentiality of budget deliberations
36.2	Congressional testimony and communications
36.3	Clearance of materials for Congress and the media
36.4	Clearance of changes to the President's budget
36.5	Information available to the public

36.1 Confidentiality of budget deliberations.

The nature and amounts of the President's decisions and the underlying materials are confidential. Do not release them outside of your agency until the budget is transmitted to Congress. Presidential decisions on current and budget year estimates (other than forecasts of items that will be transmitted formally later), both in total and in detail, become the "proposed appropriations" as that term is used in the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921, as amended, and must be justified by your agency. Do not release agency justifications provided to OMB and any agency future year plans or long-range estimates to anyone outside the executive branch, except in accordance with this section.

36.2 Congressional testimony and communications.

The Executive Branch communications that led to the President's budget decisions will not be disclosed either by the agencies or by those who have prepared the budget. In addition, agency justifications provided to OMB and any agency future year plans or long-range estimates will not be furnished to anyone outside the executive branch, except in accordance with this section.

When furnishing information on appropriations and budgetary matters, you (and your agency representatives) should be aware of the following limitation on communications:

"... An officer or employee of an agency may submit to Congress or a committee of Congress an appropriations estimate or request, a request for an increase in that estimate or request, or a recommendation on meeting the financial needs of the government only when requested by either House of Congress." (31 U.S.C. 1108)

You should also be aware of restrictions on communications to influence legislation that are not conducted through proper official channels (18 U.S.C. 1913).

After formal transmittal of the budget, an amendment, or a supplemental appropriation request, the following policies apply when testifying before any congressional committee or communicating with Members of Congress:

- Witnesses will give frank and complete answers to all questions.

SECTION 36 – COMMUNICATIONS WITH CONGRESS AND THE PUBLIC AND CLEARANCE REQUIREMENTS

- Witnesses will avoid volunteering personal opinions that reflect positions inconsistent with the President's program or appropriation request.
- If statutory provisions exist for the direct submission of the agency budget request to Congress, OMB may provide you additional materials supporting the President's budget request that you will forward to Congress with the agency testimony. Witnesses will be prepared to explain the agency submission, the request in the President's budget, and any justification material.
- When responding to specific questions on program and appropriations requests, witnesses will not provide the agency request to OMB or plans for the use of appropriations that exceed the President's request. Typically, witnesses are responsible for one or a few programs, whereas the President is responsible for all the needs of the Federal Government given the revenues available. Where appropriate, witnesses should explain this difference in perspective and that it is therefore not appropriate for them to support appropriations above the President's request.
- When asked to provide a written response that involves a statement of opinion on program and appropriations requests, witnesses will provide a reply through the agency head.
- Do not let your communications be perceived as an "appropriations estimate or request ... or an increase in that estimate or request" (31 U.S.C. 1108). You are expected to support the President's budgetary decisions and seek adjustments to those decisions only through established procedures if your agency head determines such action is necessary.

36.3 Clearance of materials for Congress and the media.

Policy consistency between the President's budget and the budget-related materials prepared for Congress and the media is essential. To ensure this consistency, you are required to submit budget-related materials to OMB for clearance prior to transmittal to congressional committees or individual Members of Congress or their staff. Unless a specific exemption is approved by OMB, materials subject to OMB clearance include:

- All budget justifications and budget-related oversight materials;
- Testimony before and letters to congressional committees;
- Written responses to congressional inquiries or other materials for record;
- Materials responding to committee and subcommittee reporting requirements;
- Capability statements;
- Appeals letters;
- Reprogramming requests;
- Related cost information;

- Financial management documents addressing budget and policy issues (e.g., some accountability reports or transmittal documents for audited financial statements); and
- Proposed press releases relating to the President's budget.

Provide this information to OMB five working days in advance to allow adequate review time. OMB review of reprogramming requests may take longer in some circumstances (e.g., if the request has not been coordinated or if supporting materials have not been provided concurrently). In exceptional circumstances where the response time is very short, agencies may request oral clearance or make other arrangements for expedited review. Immediately after the budget transmittal and after subsequent transmittals, provide OMB with a schedule of anticipated congressional reviews that require agency oral and written participation. Revise this schedule as appropriate.

Address any questions you have about this subsection to the OMB representatives who you normally consult on budget-related matters.

36.4 Clearance of changes to the President's budget.

If you want to propose changes to the President's budget (e.g., appropriations language, limitations, business-type statements required by the Government Corporation Control Act, and dollar amounts), you must follow the confidentiality and clearance guidance provided in this section and submit a written request as described in section 110. OMB will notify you whether a formal transmittal of the change will be made.

When it is possible to reduce the amount of an appropriations request before action has been taken by the Appropriations Committee of either House, the head of your agency should inform OMB promptly. Before your agency head decides to request restoration of a reduction, the reasons for the reduction, the circumstances under which it was made, and its significance to the President's program should be carefully considered.

36.5 Information available to the public.

Many agency budget documents that are subject to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) are exempt from mandatory release pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(5). Depending on the nature of the record requested, other FOIA exemptions may apply. When deciding whether to withhold a budget document that is exempt from mandatory release, follow the FOIA memoranda issued by the President and the Attorney General on October 4, 1993, which establish a presumption in favor of disclosure. Whether a document concerns a future, current, or past fiscal year is a significant factor in deciding whether it should be withheld under FOIA Exemption 5; the release of budget or current year information is more likely to harm the budget process than release of previous fiscal year information. Agency heads are responsible for determining the propriety of record releases under FOIA.

Certain agencies headed by a collegial body may be required to hold their meetings open to public observation unless the agency properly determines that the matter to be discussed warrants the closing of those meetings for reasons enumerated in the Government in the Sunshine Act (Public Law 94-409). Some meetings covered by that Act may pertain to budgetary information discussed in this Circular. Although, as with the FOIA, it is not possible to determine merely by the generic category of such information whether such an agency would be authorized to close a particular meeting covered by the Government in the Sunshine Act, the premature disclosure of budgetary information may “be likely to significantly frustrate implementation of a proposed agency action” (5 U.S.C. 552b(c)(9)(B)). Furthermore, other exemptions from the open meeting requirements of the Act may apply. Such agencies are responsible for the propriety of determinations that would lead to the disclosure of this budgetary information.

F: PARKER

■ WHEN OLD HABITS ARE HARD TO BREAK

By DAVID BAUMANN

When he was a member of the House Appropriations Committee, Mike Parker helped to earmark billions of federal dollars for projects for fellow lawmakers, particularly those from his home state of Mississippi. Now, as a member of the Bush Administration, Parker is supposed to be helping in the White House's crusade against such earmarks. But he is refusing to be a good soldier.

Parker, who served in Congress from 1989 to '98, heads the Army Corps of Engineers' fiscal 2003 budget request. He said that as an appropriator, "I always looked at OMB and never had those warm and fuzzy feelings." He added, "Now that I've been in the Administration, I still don't have those warm and fuzzy feelings."

Parker seems headed for a run-in with the White House, which objected to earmarked Army Corps projects in its budget proposal last month. "In recent years, the Congress has authorized and appropriated funds for the Corps to undertake an increasing number of projects that fall outside the scope of its historic missions, such as building sewage treatment plants, revitalizing local waterfronts, and maintaining waterways for local recreation," stated the Bush budget, which was prepared by the OMB. "These ancillary projects divert resources and delay completion of economically justified projects that are within the Corps' primary mission areas."

Asked for a response to Parker's testimony, OMB officials declined to comment.

Parker, a former funeral home director, was a Democrat when he was first elected to the House in 1988, but he switched to the Republican Party in 1995. After leaving the House, he ran for Mississippi governor in November 1999 and lost in a race so close that it had to be decided by the Democratic-controlled state Legislature. He joined the Bush Administration in October.

Parker told the Budget Committee that the Corps requested $6.4 billion for its main programs in fiscal 2003, but OMB penciled in only $4 billion. He noted that when he was in Congress, he believed that Administration officials purposely lowballed the Corps' budgets, knowing that lawmakers would add more money. "I would not be so brash as to suggest that's what's going on here," Parker testified in a statement tinged with sarcasm.

In fact, Parker did go on to suggest that Congress will add earmarked projects and money to the Corps' budget this year. "Congress makes that determination," he said of his agency's spending level. Asked how he would react if President Bush vetoed a spending bill over earmarks, Parker replied, "That's not something that I agree with."

As a House member, Parker fought hard for earmarks. For instance, he actively supported a project to dredge Sardis Lake, located in the district of a fellow appropriator, Rep. Roger Wicker, R-Miss. The final fiscal 1998 Energy and Water appropriations bill doled out $1.9 million for the Army Corps to dredge a portion of the lake to create a marina basin for recreational activities.

President Clinton determined that the Corps had not conducted appropriate studies of the project. He used the line-item veto (later declared unconstitutional) to strike the funding from the bill, despite efforts by Parker, Wicker, and Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., to defend the project. The Associated Press reported at the time that Parker even called then-OMB Deputy Director Jacob Lew to suggest that Clinton not use the line-item veto on projects for lawmakers who were supporting the Administration's bid for controversial "fast-track" trade legislation.

The Sardis Lake project was just one of many Corps earmarks that Mississippi received during Parker's tenure as an appropriator. And earmarking is unlikely to end anytime soon. Despite efforts by Bush Administration officials to curb the practice last year, it actually increased: Congress is spending $431 million for earmarked Corps projects in fiscal 2002, up from $367 million the year before.

Rep. Sonny Callahan, R-Ala., the chairman of the House Energy and Water Development Appropriations Subcommittee, noted in an interview that all Administrations try to eliminate congressional earmarks. "They want the bureaucracy to control the flow of money," Callahan said. That may be true, but apparently, not all Administration officials can be counted on to attack Congress over the issue. ■

MIKE PARKER: A former House member who still looks favorably on congressional earmarks, even though he's now in the Bush Administration.

1989 to '98, heads the Army Corps of Engineers, which oversees many dam, dredging, and other construction projects sought by lawmakers. In an interview, he made clear that in the ongoing fight between the Administration and congressional appropriators over such pork barrel projects, his loyalty remains with Capitol Hill.

"Congress has a legitimate right to make decisions about what's best for their states and districts," Parker said, while taking a sharp jab at the Office of Management and Budget, which is leading the White House's anti-earmarking campaign. "I've never said anything good about OMB."

Parker, 52, was equally blunt when he testified before the Senate Budget Com-

CONSERVATIVES FOR BALANCED ELECTRICITY REFORMS

February 28, 2002

The Honorable Tom Daschle
SH-509 Hart Senate Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20510-4103

Dear Senator Daschle,

Earlier this month, Senator Murkowski characterized comprehensive energy legislation developed by the Senate Democratic leadership – particularly the Democrats' electricity title – a “virtual wish list” for Enron. We applaud Senator Murkowski and encourage every member of the Senate to give careful consideration to his analysis as the Senate begins its overdue debate on America's energy policy.

As Senator Murkowski observed: “...Enron never wanted to deregulate electricity. Instead, they wanted to federalize electricity. They wanted to put FERC, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, in charge. Enron wanted to create a one-size-fits-all system... By knocking down states' rights in exchange for federal command and control, Enron would have gained substantial advantage in energy markets at the hands of state protections for consumers.”

Federalize electricity... put FERC in charge... one-size-fits-all... knock down states' rights and state consumer protections... federal command and control – all of these things are at the center of electricity “reforms” proposed by Senators Daschle and Bingaman. Their proposals consistently entail provisions that would result in a vast and unwarranted bloating of federal regulatory powers at the expense of the states. More importantly, the Daschle-Bingaman electricity proposals would often substitute remote, untested and capricious federal authority over proven state consumer protections. Finally, the essence of the Daschle-Bingaman electricity provisions is MORE REGULATION rather than LESS REGULATION.

If this is the end result of over a half-decade of congressional debate concerning electricity reforms in America, then it would be best that the Senate not even take up this issue this year. Better to do nothing than do what Senators Daschle and Bingaman are prescribing.

There is a more prudent path available to the Senate – adopt long standing reform proposals advanced by Senator Murkowski. These proposals represent meaningful reforms that are genuinely deregulatory and can not be mistaken as being “straight out of the Enron playbook.”

Subject: Bush to Propose $135 Million for Abstinence Education

Bush to ask Congress for large budget increase for sexual abstinence programs

By LAURA MECKLER=
Associated Press Writer=

WASHINGTON (AP) _ Sexual abstinence programs that bar any discussion of birth control or condoms to prevent pregnancy or AIDS are in line for a 33 percent increase in the budget President Bush is to submit to Congress.

Spending on "abstinence-only" education has been climbing over the last five years, as conservatives argue that teaching teen-agers about contraception indirectly condones teen sex. Critics say there is little evidence showing abstinence programs work.

The president will propose $135 million for abstinence-only education next year, an increase of $33 million, according to an administration official who spoke Wednesday on condition of anonymity.

The request fulfills a pledge Bush made while campaigning for president to spend as much promoting abstinence as some have calculated the government spends educating teens about contraception.

Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson noted that the programs are very popular with many of his Republican colleagues, though he acknowledged a paucity of evidence of their effectiveness.

"The president feels, the administration feels, a lot of people in Congress feel that this is a much better way to attempt to solve this problem of teen-age pregnancy," Thompson said in an interview Wednesday. "Let's try them out and see if we can't get it to work."

Thompson said he is interested to see the results of extensive research on the program now under way. "I'm a results-oriented kind of person," he said.

Proponents argue that the nation has spent considerable money on birth control services, yet nearly 900,000 teen-agers get pregnant each year and one in three American babies is born to unmarried parents.

Opponents say it's unrealistic to push abstinence, given that many teen-agers already are having sex, and the surgeon general and others say there is no evidence the programs work.

"I find it stunning that an administration that touts the values of science when it comes to environmental policy can't run fast enough away from science when it comes to sexual health," said James Wagoner, president of Advocates for Youth, which supports "abstinence-plus" programs. These encourage teens to say no to sex but suggest contraceptives and condoms for those who do not.

Intense debate over abstinence-only programs began in 1995 and 1996, when Congress was writing the massive welfare overhaul. The final legislation included $50 million per year for abstinence education, to be nearly matched by participating states. The money may not be combined with programs that discuss the benefits of contraception.

Under the law, the programs must meet one of eight goals. Among them: teaching that sex outside marriage probably would have harmful psychological and physical effects, how to reject sexual advances and why drugs and alcohol make avoiding sex more difficult.

Uncomfortable with the program, many states used their money to run pro-virginity media campaigns or after-school programs that make little if any mention of sex or abstinence.

Conservatives in Congress complained that states were dodging the intent of the program and created a new pool of abstinence-only money distributed directly by HHS. This program, which is where Bush wants the money increase, is meant to pay for programs that overtly discuss the value of avoiding sex.

According to the administration official, the Bush budget will ask Congress for abstinence-only money in three pieces:

_ $50 million in grants to states through the welfare program.

The welfare law, which included automatic funding for the abstinence program each year, must be renewed this year. Bush will propose that the program remain at $50 million, at least for the first year. This request will be considered as part of the larger debate over what changes are needed in the welfare law, and proposals to modify the abstinence program are certain.

_ $73 million, an increase of $33 million, in competitive HHS grants.

_ $12 million, the same as this year, for the Adolescent and Family Life program, which provides money to states through a formula to work with teen mothers.

MEMORANDUM

To: Karl Rove
From: David Abshire

I am glad your meeting with Gil Robinson was fruitful. Congratulations on the progress made in this area.

I have another related item on the battle of ideas. It is from Dick Fairbanks, a former Ambassador at Large, Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Affairs, and Middle East Negotiator in the Reagan Administration. I enclose a page about his important initiative, and he has taken some soundings on financial support for his idea.

I think you should meet with Dick, and I have suggested he call your office.

Enclosure

Proposal:

To initiate a U.S.-private sector television broadcasting station in the Gulf (an American Al Jazirah).

Background:

The Arabic-speaking television (mostly satellite) audience in the Middle East approaches 300 million (as opposed to more remote areas, such as Afghanistan, where radio is still the dominant medium). In the G.C.C. states, as well as Syria, Jordan, Lebanon and Egypt, TV has primacy. The only American outlet in the region is English language CNN – but only a limited number of the elite can follow it. An American-funded and run station broadcasting in the vernacular (7/24) could provide an alternative to Al Jazirah and present international news without the Qatar-sanctioned “spin.” It would also schedule entertainment, sports, etc., to grow viewer allegiance. The opportunity to present U.S. news and culture directly to the populace of this key region could be crucial in our long term struggle for hearts and minds.

Methodology:

Create a not-for-profit private U.S. entity with initial seed funding from a private U.S. foundation. Additional money, expertise, and staffing would be sought from the U.S. broadcasting industry, the major media companies, and the networks.

Conclusion:

Initial contacts and discussions indicate that this idea might take hold quickly, if the White House reacts favorably (and assuming that the idea does not compete with a government initiative). The private sector character of the station would permit relatively early implementation and would have a possible advantage in credibility as well.

To: Karl Rove

From: David Abshire

I would like to visit with you informally on the following agenda:

1. "Communicating America." Gil Robinson has worked with you, the Pentagon, et al. on the information battle. You are all to be congratulated on the enormous progress and the effective operation of the Treaty Room. This productive effort relates to tactical-daily management. It is reinforced by the SFRC initiative on Radio Afghanistan, which actually envisions stepped up broadcasts, TV, and Internet to the entire Muslim world. (This is called Initiative 911.) At the strategic level, however, there is missing an overall architecture for what we call "Communicating America," marshaling public and private resources in the longer term battle for "hearts and minds." I would like to discuss some specific thoughts we have in this regard.
2. "Civil Libertarians." I picked up a good idea from a young political appointee with a legal background: He was concerned that the "civil libertarians" on the right and on the left may grow even shriller as the crisis progresses. The President can take the sting out of most of this simply by saying that in a year he will review the impact and need for each of these items.
3. "Thinking Outside the Box." Gil Robinson handed you our public report on "strategic reform" to build better anticipation, integration, and agility within government. The published report reflects concepts we raised with Administration officials this past year. I would like to discuss with you where I think we stand on all this with several parts of the Administration. With his careful cool leadership, the President, as war leader, is taking historic footsteps like Lincoln and Roosevelt. By and large, the War Cabinet is very able in its daily management. Strengths, however, always create potentials for weakness. I think ours is a lack of organization to think outside the box, as well as to create a larger vision.

January 22, 2002

Mr. Karl Rove
Senior Advisor to the President
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Ave., NW
Washington, DC 20500
Attn: Susan Ralston

Dear Mr. Rove:

On behalf of The New England Council, the nation's oldest regional business group, I am pleased to invite you to speak at our annual White House Briefing on March 13, 2002. The briefing will take place in the Auditorium (Room 450) of the Old Executive Office Building and is scheduled to begin at 3:00pm and adjourn at 5:00pm.

Each year, members of the Council join our Board of Directors for two days of meetings in Washington with key leaders of Congress and the Administration. These meetings provide important and valued opportunities to discuss issues of concern to our region that may arise during the year. Last year, we were pleased to be joined by Chief of Staff Andrew Card, Secretary Mel Martinez and Administrator Christine Whitman.

Once again, we expect approximately 100 business leaders from throughout the New England region to attend the meeting. Members are also drawn from academic institutions, hospitals, public agencies and non-profit groups. The purpose of this briefing is to further enlighten our members as to what the coming legislative year may have in store for their industries and the New England economy. Hearing your thoughts and views would be a great benefit to our members. It will also offer you a chance to speak to the business leaders of New England in an informal setting.

I will contact your office to confirm your availability to speak to our group on March 13, 2002. If you or your staff have any questions, please contact me at (202) 547-0048. Thank you for your consideration of this request. I look forward to seeing you in March.

Very Truly Yours,

Governor O'Bannon welcomes steel tariffs, encourages more action

Governor Frank O'Bannon welcomed President Bush's decision today to impose tariffs ranging from 8 percent to 30 percent on imported steel products but said he hoped the president would join with Congress to protect the pensions of retired steelworkers.

"I'm pleased that the president has taken action against foreign companies that have dumped steel at unfairly low prices in the United States, undermining our domestic industry and damaging the livelihood of the steelworkers who have toiled in it," O'Bannon said.

"The president deserves credit for bringing the issue to the forefront by initiating a trade investigation.

"I now call on President Bush to turn his attention to negotiating reductions in excess foreign steel production, assisting dislocated steelworkers in their search for new jobs and protecting retirees' pensions. Without federal help, I fear that tens of thousands of steel company retirees will be put at risk as unfair trade practices continue unabated and more American steel companies go bankrupt."

Indiana, with 30,000 steelworkers, produces 30 percent of the nation's steel. O'Bannon has consistently supported measures to assist the ailing industry and its workers.

Jim Robinson, director of District 7 of the United Steelworkers of America, said called Bush's decision a victory for democracy.

"A lot of people, including the governor of Indiana, demanded that their government take action," he said. "Steel-state political leaders, including Frank O'Bannon, got this done."

O'Bannon reiterated his request - sent by letter and also conveyed by an emissary - to Labor Secretary Elaine Chao to act quickly on Indiana's application for $6.3 million in federal money intended to help out-of-work steelworkers get training for new careers.

The governor also has asked Chao to do what she could to separate the issue of extending unemployment insurance benefits by 13 weeks from other, more controversial facets of economic stimulus proposals that have held up action on workers' assistance.

Social Security Rethink

By William Raspberry

Monday, March 4, 2002; Page A19

I remain an agnostic when it comes to the idea of allowing workers to invest a portion of their Social Security payroll taxes. But I'm starting to feel like an agnostic inching his way toward belief. I'm not sure whether this is due more to the persuasiveness of those advocating privatizing part of Social Security or to the breathtaking weakness of the arguments on the other side.

To begin with the latter: Enron. The reason we shouldn't be allowed to put part of our Social Security money in the stock market is that markets go down as well as up. The collapse of Enron Corp., which shredded the savings plans of thousands of workers, is ringing proof of the danger of tinkering with Social Security. Suppose you were approaching retirement, and the bulk of your Social Security nest egg was in Enron stock.

But if that's an argument against allowing workers to put part of their payroll taxes into the market (as opposed to an argument for diversification), then it must also be an argument against allowing me to have stocks and bonds as a part of my 401(k) plan. And because no one is making that second argument, my conclusion is that no thoughtful person believes the first.

Another argument against partial privatization is based on the fact that the Social Security checks of current annuitants are paid out of the payroll deductions of current workers. Thus, any part of payroll taxes diverted to the market would reduce the amount of money to pay today's retirees. Either the deductions would have to be increased (or supplemented), or the checks would have to be reduced.

At least that is the argument. A lot would depend on whether the Social Security Trust Fund has enough money to offset the stock market investments until stock appreciation and compounding close the gap.

Much of the argument against a thrift-savings component to Social Security amounts to little more than liberals against conservatives. Conservatives love it, so liberals must oppose it. It would be good if we could move beyond this partisan silliness and deal with some of the real issues -- and perceptions -- of the matter.

The issue of transition could be solved by simply decreeing that no Social Security recipient would receive less in monthly payments under the reform plan than under the current one.

A much more serious issue is: Who would choose and manage the investments? Leave it to individual workers and you'll get a certain number of idiots putting the whole shebang into some equivalent of Enron. Leave it to private managers or government agents and you give them the power to make or break market sectors or individual companies.

It's a problem, but not beyond the ability of bright minds to solve. One approach might be to establish age-specific guidelines for stock-bond-cash ratios, with the stock portion comprising the broadest available stock-market index -- say, the Wilshire 5000.

But opponents might fairly ask, why not just leave things as they are, automatic and guaranteed against market fluctuations?

The simple answer: You can't. As Henry J. Aaron, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, explains it, the system is unsustainable for the long term. Either taxes will have to be increased or benefits cut.

One way to soften the effect, he says, is to invest in the private market, which, over time, should produce a better return than the government bonds Social Security invests in now. But Aaron makes a point that keeps me agnostic about privatization. "Make the investments through individual accounts and you increase the administrative costs to the point where it eliminates the difference in the implied rate of return. The greatest savings would come through a pooled investment fund, where administrative costs could be kept relatively low."

Moreover, he said, assuming that the funds would be invested in the broadest index over a long period, the payoff would be the same as the average payoff from individual accounts. In other words, individual accounts could beat the average only if others fell below it. And because the idea of Social Security is to guarantee basic income in retirement, individual investment accounts become less attractive.

All the tsk-tsking about Enron is just a distraction.

BODY:

Ralph Reed is in an odd position.

The chairman of the Georgia Republican Party may be one of the few political figures in the United States who can benefit by proving he worked for Enron before its spectacular bankruptcy.

Reed was put on the defensive following media reports Enron hired him as a consultant in 1997 as a favor to the Bush presidential campaign. Both Reed and Enron deny any such collusion, but the Federal Elections Commission has been asked to investigate.

And White House chief of staff Karl Rove, who as Bush's political adviser recommended Reed to Enron, has been asked to supply Congress with details.

How Reed came to be hired and what he did to earn up to $20,000 a month has become a subplot in the investigation into Enron's political influence. Evidence indicates Reed's job was no gift.

But the story of Enron and Reed in Pennsylvania may in fact illustrate some larger themes: how a huge, politically aware company eagerly spread money to establish connections, often to little effect. And how the tactics of political campaigns have shifted to the corporate arena.

The Reed-Enron saga unfolded five years ago when deregulation --- putting an end to the monopoly enjoyed by public utilities --- was all the rage.

Deregulated airline and telecommunication industries were heralded as successful precedents. Pennsylvania, California and other states were tackling electricity. In Georgia, the Legislature was taking up natural gas deregulation.

The fever had already spread to Washington, with Enron's help. The company gave $1 million to members of Congress in 1996 and 1998, both election years. The object was to force the opening of the nation's $230 billion-a-year electricity market. Enron had its eye on 10 percent of those billions.

But in reality, utility deregulation was --- and remains --- a state-by-state venture. In 1997, Enron had a finger in every pie, including Georgia. But it was putting its emphasis on two of the largest electrical markets -- California and Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania looked particularly ripe. Because of utilities' over-investments in nuclear power, residential users were paying nearly double what the average Georgian now pays for electricity.

Enron began dropping a total of $1 million into the campaign coffers of state lawmakers in Harrisburg.

However, the issue quickly passed to the state's Public Utility Commission. For nine months, the commission negotiated with Peco Energy Co. It was Pennsylvania's largest electric utility, with 1.3 million residential customers, mostly in the Philadelphia area. Negotiators were within days of cutting a deal that would have given ratepayers a 10 percent discount but would also have driven away most competition.

Plan 'a huge gamble'

That's when Enron made its move.

"It was a huge gamble," said John Hanger, then a Democratic member of the Public Utility Commission. "We were talking billions of dollars and the fate of these companies."

The Houston company came up with a plan of its own, which included a 20 percent rate cut for residential users. Enron simply intended to supplant Peco as the provider of electricity. Other marketers still would be pressured out.

"We came up with the idea of a six-week, political-style campaign. We had to put it together quickly. I mean in a matter of days," said Mark Palmer, vice president for corporate communications.

Now the company needed someone to run the campaign.

Enron first flew to Houston the Democratic political consultant James Carville, who had just finished running President Clinton's re-election campaign. Carville turned Enron down, Palmer said, because he was making too much money on the lecture circuit.

Reed, 36, was the only other candidate interviewed. He had just quit the Christian Coalition to start his own political consulting business, Century Strategies, in suburban Atlanta.

The alleged object of the hiring was to keep Reed, then one of the most influential voices among religious conservatives, in the Bush camp and out of the hands of other candidates during the early days of the 2000 presidential campaign. The story, if true, might amount to an illegal campaign gift.

Such a gift would imply Reed --- who now says he already supported Bush anyway --- did little or nothing for Enron to earn monthly fees of $10,000 to $20,000.

Reed no longer will comment publicly on his work for the energy company, which he considers "proprietary."

But Enron's Palmer, who was Reed's supervisor on the Pennsylvania job, said the Georgia consultant did substantial work and made daily reports. "We'd talk sometimes four or five times a day. He'd tell me what he was doing and what the subcontractors were doing," Palmer said.

Access to political tools

Palmer was part of a small group of Enron executives who made the decision to hire Reed. He has said he didn't know who Rove was, and no recommendation filtered down from above.

While Enron talked with Carville about commanding its "war room" and guiding Enron strategy, Reed was handed a lesser role. His appeal, according to Enron, was his ready access to the tools of politics --- direct mail, polling and telemarketing.

Reed would report to Enron's headquarters from his Gwinnett County base. Decisions were made out of Houston, and Reed never went to Pennsylvania during the campaign.

Perhaps because this was a first foray into a nonpartisan campaign, Reed found a partner. Sandra Fraro, a vice president of Century Strategies, said the firm gave some of the Pennsylvania work to a longtime Democratic operative "who knew the state well." But at Reed's insistence, she would not identify him.

The Washington-based consultant refused to be quoted by name but confirmed he worked Democratic telephones in Pennsylvania, a famously moderate state, while Reed worked Republicans. Both were expected to create at least the illusion of grass-roots support for Enron.

The Democrat said it was clear Reed was looking for a long-term relationship with Enron. "[Reed] horsewhipped me," the consultant said, into giving results.

But arguing most forcefully in Reed's defense is the fact that before it hired him, Enron was already poised to spend millions in a daring bid to corner one of the largest electrical markets in the United States. Measured in terms of cash, any favor done for the Bush campaign wasn't a large one and coincided with Enron's needs.

At the time, the company was in dire need of political influence. While much has been made of the clout Enron purchased in Washington, the company's record in state capitals was unimpressive.

In most cases, including Pennsylvania, Enron found itself outgunned by local power utilities and their long-standing relationships with the local officials who wrote the rules on deregulation.

Enron placed Reed in charge of direct mailings. He also helped with radio scripts, Palmer said.

But the work Reed is most reluctant to discuss is the "grass-roots" campaign he conducted for Enron, with Democratic help.

Such work is a Century Strategies specialty. "What our firm does is create and maintain grass-roots movements," Reed said in a recent interview. "We're not a lobbying firm. We're an anti-lobbying firm."

On the commercial side, it often involves locating regular people who identify with a company's position on an issue, then persuading them to contact public officials, write letters or show up at public meetings. Secrecy and third-party dealing become paramount. The punch is lost when an official can distinguish between the spontaneous and the manufactured.

Memo may shed light

A memo Reed later wrote to Enron soliciting more business may shed more light on his tactics in Pennsylvania.

In October 2000, Reed offered to help the company deregulate the electricity industry by tapping friends in Washington and mobilizing religious leaders and pro-family groups. In the memo, uncovered by The Washington Post, Reed said the validity of Enron's arguments were less important than the source.

"There are certain people --- a friend or family member, key party person, civic or business leader or major donor --- whose correspondence must be presented to the [elected] official for his personal reading and response," Reed wrote.

Such prominent figures could act as surrogates for Enron while pressing lawmakers to rewrite statutes.

"Elected officials and regulators will be predisposed to favor greater market-oriented solutions if they hear from business, civic and religious leaders in their communities," he wrote.

Reed asked Enron to pay his firm $25,000 for generating letters to the editors in newspapers. A $79,500 telemarketing campaign would call citizens and offer to connect them with their members of Congress.

If used in Pennsylvania, such tactics would explain why Reed wasn't front and center. "We didn't hire him to be a lobbyist at all," Palmer said.

Mass media battle

Eventually, Palmer said, Enron abandoned its grass-roots approach in favor of mass media.

Houston hired a plane to tow a banner around Peco's headquarters. Millions were spent on a television campaign. Then-Gov. Tom Ridge got a phone call from his colleague in Texas, George W. Bush, who put in a plug for the Houston company.

Peco retaliated with David Leisure, the actor who created Joe Isuzu, the lying car salesman. In a series of Peco commercials, Leisure wore a 10-gallon hat and his trademark smirk. "Hi, I represent your out-of-state energy company," he said. "You can trust me."

All the hoopla was pointed at the five appointed members of the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission.

In December 1997, the commission voted 5-0 against Enron's proposal. "We didn't fully understand the financing and didn't think it was wholly feasible," said Hanger. The commission also doubted it could strip one utility of more than a million customers and hand them to another.

Still, the Houston company went away partly satisfied. The commission had scuttled the deal for Peco as well.

There ended the most intensive period of work that Reed performed for Enron.

Pennsylvania came up with a deregulation plan the following May. But Enron's interest was already waning.

It had suffered a terrible defeat in trying to shape deregulation in California.

Ten months after hiring Reed and spending tens of millions of dollars, Enron exited the retail electric marketing business. It abandoned virtually all efforts to serve residential customers in one state after another, including Pennsylvania.

Several months later, it was no surprise when Enron declined to become a natural gas marketer in Georgia as deregulation kicked in here.

Palmer said that after Pennsylvania, Reed's assistance to Enron became less about logistics and more about advice. It also became more Washington-oriented.

As for Reed, he says the income from Enron was significant "for maybe the first month or two, but after that, no." In 1999 and 2000, he did more than $141,000 in consulting for the Bush presidential campaign.

Apparently, the Oct. 23, 2000, memo Reed wrote, trying to expand his business with Enron, never took. At the end, the state GOP chairman said, Enron wasn't one of his major clients.

COMMENTS:

FYI

Every Senator takes an oath to support and defend the Constitution. Voting for legislation that you believe inconsistent with the Constitution would violate that oath. Don't do that.

If you can honestly say you believe the restrictions on the very political speech that is at the core of what the founders wanted to protect when they adopted the First Amendment will be found constitutional, ignore this letter. But if you believe they won't pass muster by a court that actually believes in free speech, do everyone a favor by voting against it. Don't make the courts do your job.

Dear Mr. President:

In my capacity as President of the Ethics & Religious Liberty Commission, I have the privilege of speaking around the United States to large groups of Southern Baptists. I am receiving an overwhelming number of requests from our constituency to urge you in the strongest possible terms to veto the Campaign Finance Reform Bill, which will be presented to you shortly.

People are concerned that the bill is unconstitutional in its restrictions on the First Amendment's free speech guarantees. Further, they are concerned that it will simply empower the liberal and biased national media to have greater influence over the election process.

In light of these concerns, I urge you to send Congress back to the drawing board with a clear mandate to send you a constitutionally acceptable alternative bill. Enclosed is a copy of a resolution "On Protecting Free Speech in Campaign Finance Legislation" passed overwhelmingly by the Southern Baptist Convention in its annual meeting in June of 2001.

On another note of importance, I will be going to Brussels, Strasbourg, Paris, and Moscow in March to discuss with government officials the religious registration laws that are being used to discriminate against religious minorities in those countries. I was invited in my capacity as your nominee to the Commission on International Religious Freedom.

In Moscow, I will be addressing the Russian academy for top level civil servants. In all of these meetings, I will be referring to your eloquent speech to the university students in Beijing. I will use your statements on freedom generally, and religious freedom in particular, in this and other venues.

Thank you for speaking the truth to the people of China.

Sincerely,

Richard D. Land
President

Re: President Bush's Trip to Peru

One of President Toledo's main agenda items is to improve the agriculture economy of Peru, especially in products for export. Already there are several tax incentives in place favoring agriculture. Additionally, converting coca farming into other profitable forms of agriculture is a main weapon in the fight against the drug trade.

I have made a significant investment in Peru (and have Peruvian partners) in a farm growing asparagus and citrus, all for export. It has been written up by the Peruvian press as an example of how the laws affecting foreign investment and the tax incentives for agriculture can work. It has also been hailed by the Israeli press as "the most sophisticated farm" in the world! The farm also employs on a permanent basis over 200 workers which with Peru's ailing economy shows how a successful agricultural project can improve the local economy.

The farm is in the desert, 25km north of Ica (about 270 km south of Lima), and is 20 km from Pisco where there is a major Peruvian Air Force installation where Air Force One can land. I propose a reception at the farm (photo op) hosting major political, business, and agricultural leaders.

President Bush could arrive, have a quick tour of the farm, and perhaps make a short speech about trade cooperation, Peruvian-American relations, etc. with President Toledo at his side (and also give President Toledo a venue to push his agenda).

I will cooperate in any way the President wants.

CIAT COALITION TO INSURE AGAINST TERRORISM

POLICYHOLDERS LAUNCH COALITION TO SEEK PASSAGE OF TERRORISM INSURANCE PLAN

Washington, D.C. -- A number of leading trade associations and individual companies have banded together to speak for business insurance policyholders as part of a continuing effort to win passage of a terrorism insurance plan on Capitol Hill.

The groups, representing significant policyholders throughout the transportation, real estate, manufacturing, construction, entertainment and retail sectors, have formed the Coalition to Insure Against Terrorism (CIAT).

“Gaps in insurance coverage against acts of terrorism weaken our economy, and pose a very real threat to our homeland security,” said Martin DePoy, vice president of government relations at the National Association of Real Estate Investment Trusts® and a spokesperson for the new coalition. “Unfortunately, the insurance industry has neither the capacity nor the willingness to underwrite comprehensive terrorism coverage at this point in time.”

Coalition members have expressed concerns that unless Congress steps in, terrorism-related coverage will be available only at prohibitively high rates, if at all. “The economic impact of further terrorist attacks on the businesses represented by coalition members is immeasurable. Without insurance, it could be catastrophic,” DePoy said.

Faced with what CIA Director George Tenet recently described as a convergence of threats, the nation’s policyholders are looking to Congress to quickly adopt a federal insurance security net to ensure that comprehensive terror-related coverage is both available and affordable. “Each day brings renewed warnings from U.S. officials of possible attacks on private facilities, famous landmarks and infrastructure such as airports,” DePoy explained. “It is properties like these that will find it especially difficult, if not impossible, to obtain adequate terrorism insurance coverage.”

CIAT intends to ask Members of Congress to work together in the interests of all policyholders and craft a plan that will give insurers the means to provide comprehensive coverage. "At this critical time in the nation's history, a dysfunctional insurance system could both jeopardize our economic recovery and weaken our homeland security," DePoy added.

USA: Lobby groups join forces on U.S. terror insurance.

02/13/2002

Reuters English News Service

(C) Reuters Limited 2002.

WASHINGTON, Feb 13 (Reuters) - Interest groups spanning a range of industries have banded together in Washington to lobby government to pass a terror insurance plan in Congress.

The group, including real estate, manufacturing and retail interests, want to show that insurers pulling terrorism coverage after Sept. 11 is harming business and the government needs to step in as a backstop.

The new organization is to be called the Coalition to Insure Against Terrorism.

Its members, along with insurers, lobbied Congress heavily for an insurance plan last year, but no legislation was passed as the issue stalled in the Senate.

The problem came about in the days after Sept. 11, as insurers declared they could not cover damage from future terrorist acts, reasoning they are impossible to predict and price for.

Insurers, facing a claims bill of up to $70 billion from Sept. 11, are raising rates and excluding terror cover this year, leaving many U.S. firms exposed.

"Gaps in insurance coverage against acts of terrorism weaken our economy and pose a very real threat to our homeland security," said Martin DePoy, vice president of government relations at the National Association of Real Estate Investment Trusts, one of the new group's members.

The new coalition brings together 25 or so interest groups, including the Association of American Railroads, the Bond Market Association, the National Association of Manufacturers, the National Football League and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

WASHINGTON—The National Football League held an out-of-the-ordinary conference call on Friday with its insurance carrier and the finance directors of all 32 pro teams, some of which are frustrated with the prices and limits that insurers are setting on policies coming up for renewal this spring.

"It was an informational meeting for the team finance directors to update them on the market conditions for insurance," said NFL spokesman Greg Aiello, adding that many teams are looking to renew annual policies now, before spring training begins.

The New York Giants had just renewed their policy the week before. But they were unable to buy terrorism coverage—a "throw-in" that used to be standard in all policies. "We are trying to obtain the coverage, and teams are having difficulty doing that," said Giants spokesman Pat Hanlon.

Across the country, insurers are offering substantially less coverage at sharply higher rates to professional sports teams in all venues. Sports stadiums were among the first commercial properties to lose terrorism coverage after the attacks, insurance executives said. Now, teams are running into the same problems as annual policies come up for renewal. Many stadiums and teams are choosing to "go bare" rather than pay the exorbitant prices that U.S. insurers now demand, according to interviews with insurance executives, Washington officials and risk managers.

"I haven't really seen a difference from Miami, San Francisco, Los Angeles. You only have a major team if you're in a substantial city," said Joe Addison, the managing director for the sports and recreation group of AON Risk Services, a division of AON Corp. "I haven't seen discrimination of a New York venue vs. other cities."

A spokesman for the Miami Dolphins said that the team doesn't have terrorism insurance, and that the team's president couldn't say whether they were trying to buy it. Officials from the Dallas Cowboys, Chicago Bears, Washington Redskins and Baltimore Ravens, as well as from Baltimore's baseball team, the Orioles, all declined to comment about reports in Washington that those teams lack terrorism coverage.

"We choose not to talk about that publicly," Ravens spokesman Kevin Byrne said.

The NFL has quietly endorsed efforts in Washington to get a federal backstop for terrorism insurance, but wouldn't publicly talk about the issue. "We're not looking to discuss it in any detail," Mr. Aiello said.

The league did, however, sign on this week as one of the founding members of a new group, the Coalition to Insure Against Terrorism, and has lobbied the issue on Capitol Hill.

Football and baseball are among the first to get a taste of the post-Sept. 11 insurance market since most teams shop for coverage between seasons, officials said.

High-profile, international venues also are having a hard time obtaining coverage in the post-Sept. 11 market. French insurer AXA SA canceled the policy for this summer's World Cup soccer tournament shortly after the September attacks. The U.S. Olympic Committee didn't secure general liability insurance for the Salt Lake Games until two days before opening ceremonies.

InsuranceMulti-Industry Coalition to Lobby
For Passage of Terrorism Insurance Bill

Twenty-six trade associations and individual companies have banded together as part of a continuing effort to win passage of a terrorism insurance plan on Capitol Hill, according to a statement issued Feb. 13 by the newly formed group.

The Coalition to Insure Against Terrorism represents interests in the transportation, real estate, manufacturing, construction, entertainment, and retail sectors.

"Gaps in insurance coverage against acts of terrorism weaken our economy, and pose a very real threat to our homeland security," said Martin DePoy, vice president of government relations at the National Association of Real Estate Investment Trusts and a spokesperson for the new coalition. "Unfortunately, the insurance industry has neither the capacity nor the willingness to underwrite comprehensive terrorism coverage at this point in time."

Coalition members expressed concern that unless Congress steps in, terrorism-related coverage will be available only at prohibitively high rates, if at all.

"The economic impact of further terrorist attacks on the businesses represented by coalition members is immeasurable. Without insurance, it could be catastrophic," DePoy said. "Each day brings renewed warnings from U.S. officials of possible attacks on private facilities, famous landmarks and infrastructure such as airports. It is properties like these that will find it especially difficult, if not impossible, to obtain adequate terrorism insurance coverage."

In January, House Financial Services Committee Chairman Michael Oxley (R-Ohio) requested the General Accounting Office to study how a lack of affordable terrorism insurance may affect American consumers and the U.S. economy. Also in January, the Bush administration contacted industry leaders to urge them to offer Congress hard evidence of the need to pass a federal backstop for terrorism coverage.

Economists have predicted that the economy, much of which depends upon the financing of insured collateral, will suffer severely if businesses cannot obtain adequate coverage. Since Sept. 11, the insurance industry has warned that it will be unable to offer adequate levels of terrorism coverage because it is unable to quantify its risks.

A last-ditch effort to bring terrorism insurance legislation to the Senate floor failed late Dec. 20 after Republicans objected to Democratic demands that the issue be considered without controversial tort reform provisions pushed by Republican members and President Bush. Prospects remain dim for legislative action on the issue without significant new developments or additional pressure brought by the administration or industry.

Members of the newly formed Coalition to Insure Against Terrorism include the Financial Services Roundtable, the International Council of Shopping Centers, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, the National Association of Home Builders, National Association of Realtors, and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, among others.

President of the United States
The White House

Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

The Shikar Safari Club International will be celebrating it's 50th Anniversary to be held at in Scottsdale Arizona in March of 2002. We would appreciate a letter recognizing our organization's 50th Anniversary. The purpose or purposes for which this Club is organized shall be the advancement of knowledge concerning the wildlife of the world, independently and in cooperation with zoological societies, universities and museums, through:

- (a) The collection of wildlife for scientific or educational purposes.
- (b) The making of still and motion pictures of wildlife to be used for scientific and educational objectives.
- (c) The collection and dissemination of information concerning wildlife.
- (d) The preservation of nearly extinct species of wildlife by encouraging and promoting the enforcement of conservation laws and other appropriate means.

We have established a very creditable reputation over the years in our support of wildlife worldwide. Our "Wildlife Officer of the Year" program with all 50 States recognizes the game Warden of the Year and provides a $10,000.00 death benefit for Game Wardens killed in the line of duty if they have won the Award. Our Foundation has made grants to worthwhile wildlife conservation programs. I am pleased to attach a summary of our accomplishments and a short history.

I would like to thank you in advance for your consideration.

God Bless America!

History, Purposes and Ideals and Projects

Shikar Safari Club International

We are proud of our 50 year history. The Club was founded in 1952 with the following history of the early days:

"A SHORT HISTORY OF THE FOUNDING OF THE SHIKAR-SAFARI CLUB INTERNATIONAL

The germ of an idea that became this club was that of Scott Hayes, an Illinois businessman turned Colorado guest rancher, Lauritz Melchior, an opera singer, and Tom Knudsen, a Los Angeles dairyman. Their thought was to have a club of men and women, who had hunted big game in Africa, who would join together each year and "visit, exchange experiences and show pictures."

The initial list Scott wrote came from Kerr & Downey, Africa's then premier safari firm. On November 8, 1951, an invitation was extended to meet in Chicago on February 4, 1952, for the first meeting. Fifty-seven people attended the first meeting and many instant lifetime friendships were cemented. It was agreed to meet again in 1953 and the club was underway. When the charter was formalized, sixty-four people contributed the $25.00 initiation fee and became our charter members.

The early annual meetings were well attended and the good friendships that developed together with the excitement of sharing adventures and movies made the meetings a highlight in each members year.

Scott Hayes was elected our first president and five regional Vice-presidents were elected, as the club attempted to maintain a geographical balance of membership.

As time passed and the obvious need of the African and Indian governments for financial assistance in their game management became more apparent, the club sought tax exempt status and lent its shoulder to providing financial and material aid.

As the time of the 60 to 90 day safari passed and better transportation made shorter safaris practical, the club expanded as more eligible people were sought out.

With the initiation of the Shikar Safari Foundation, the members of this club forged into the area of serious contributions to wildlife conservation."

Our organization makes annual grants to research, game departments and conservation organizations through our Foundation.

We are limited to 200 members worldwide and have our annual meetings in the States and overseas. Our next meeting will be in Chicago in May have 2001. We have just completed our 2000 meeting in Florida in March. We will be celebrating our 50th Anniversary in Scottsdale Arizona in March of 2002."

So as to highlight the Ideals of the Club, the following is an excerpt from our Bylaws:

"Bylaws of the

Cutler brings battle to VH1

By JOSEF ADALIAN

"The War Room" producer R.J. Cutler has signed up for a new battle: Bringing home the war on terrorism to VH1 viewers.

Cabler has begun production on a new reality series that will give U.S. servicemen and women fighting in Operation Enduring Freedom a chance to tell the stories of their lives through video diaries. Roughly 90 military personnel, selected in part because of their passion for music, will be supplied with videocams and instructed to film various elements of their daily lives.

Cutler — working with VH1 execs/exec producers Kim Rozenfeld and Julio Kollerbohm, as well as staffers at Cutler's Actual Reality Pictures — will cull the thousands of hours of footage into half-hour episodes linked thematically and by narratives related to the personal stories of various soldiers. VH1 has ordered 13 episodes of the untitled skein; no airdate has been set, but the show could bow as soon as this summer.

The Dept. of Defense is cooperating with the project but will not have any control over which footage gets on the air. Soldiers on the USS Stennis (stationed in the waters near Afghanistan), and those on bases in Kuwait and Camp Pendleton, have been equipped with cameras.

Skein will use music as a sort of "soundtrack to people's lives," according to Fred Graver, VH1's senior VP for programming and production.

"This is one of those places where music is at the center of people and what they're feeling," he said. "They're thinking about their wife or kids and a song comes up, or a song relates to a memory of home. It's easy to see how music can become part of their landscape."

VH1 execs hatched the idea for the military diary project shortly after Sept. 11 and quickly approached Cutler about coming on board.

"The military isn't open to the kind of access you want as a filmmaker, so this idea was ideally suited to a diaries-only project," Cutler said.

By early November, the skein was already in the early stages of pre-production, according to Graver.

"People have taken cameras up in airplanes, while they're doing a training mission," Cutler said. "It's some of the most remarkable footage we've ever shot."

The project is the latest example of broadcasters developing war-related series programming.

Producers Jerry Bruckheimer and Bertram van Munster are working on Warner Bros. TV's "Tales From the Front Line" for ABC (Daily Variety, Feb. 20). And CBS next month bows reality skein "American Fight Pilots."

The VH1 project will be different from other announced skeins because it won't involve camera crews.

"We have incredible access because it's them, not our crew, doing the filming," Graver said. "I think we're going to end up with some amazingly powerful stories."

In addition to the VH1 project, Cutler is working on "The Residents" for TNT and "Candidate 2012" for HBO.

UNITED STATES SENATE
◆ RESOLUTION 324 ◆

In 1962, Senate Resolution 324, submitted by Senator KUCHEL (for himself and Senators MANSFIELD, DIRKSEN, and HUMPHREY), was referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration, and, subsequently, unanimously approved by the United States Senate as follows:

Whereas the continued vitality of our Republic depends, in part, on the intelligent understanding of our political processes and the functions of our National Government by the citizens of the United States; and

Whereas the durability of a constitutional democracy is dependent upon alert, talented, vigorous competition for political leadership; and

Whereas individual Senators have cooperated with various private and university undergraduate and graduate fellowship and internship programs relating to the work of Congress; and

Whereas in the high schools of the United States, there exists among students who have been elected to student body offices in their junior or senior year a potential reservoir of young citizens who are experiencing their first responsibilities of service to a constituency and who should be encouraged to deepen their interest in and understanding of their country's political processes: Now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the Senate hereby expresses its willingness to cooperate in a nationwide competitive high school Senate youth program which would give several representative high school students from each State a short indoctrination into the operation of the United States Senate and the Federal Government generally, if such a program can be satisfactorily arranged and completely supported by private funds with no expense to the Federal Government.

RESOLUTION 146. To amend S. Res. 324 of the Eighty-seventh Congress to provide for the participation of the Department of Defense education system for dependents in overseas areas in the Senate Youth Program.
