THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Mr. President,

Attached are drafted remarks in connection with the Reading Event tomorrow.

Harriet E. Miers

Remarks for Conclusion of the Reading Event
Monday, January 22, 2001

THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN
1/22/01

- We had a terrific meeting today with reading experts and the teachers and practitioners who are putting them into practice.
- I want people to know that education will be my priority as President. We must make sure that no child will be left behind in America.
- I am committed to giving every American child the best possible start toward the American dream by teaching every child to read. We are going to have high standards. But we are going to prepare children to meet those standards. We want them to succeed, and we will take practical steps so everyone begins the accountability system on an equal footing.
- My plan will provide added resources to help states and local districts, especially confronting the issue we were discussing today – to make sure every child can read.
- We face a national emergency: too many of our children cannot read, particularly our disadvantaged students.
- In the highest poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth graders could not read at basic level in 1998.
- Reading is the gateway to learning and the foundation for all other education reform. We cannot allow ourselves to become two nations -- one that reads, and one that can't. As my friend Phyllis Hunter says, "Reading is the new civil right."
- I am looking forward to working with Congress to pass a comprehensive reading initiative, based on what science tells us works in teaching our children to read.
 - Includes diagnostic tests to identify early reading problems in K-2.
 - Establish a curriculum based on sound research, including phonics.
 - Intensive training for teachers of early grades.
 - Intervention and extra help for those having trouble reading, including summer school and after school programs.
- I have asked these experts joining me today to join me in this effort.

LUNCH WITH REPUBLICAN HOUSE AND SENATE LEADERSHIP

Monday, January 22, 2001
Cabinet Room
12:00noon – 1:00 pm
Nicholas E. Calio

TALKING POINTS

(Press Present)

- Ladies and gentlemen, welcome to the White House. Thank all of you for coming today.
- This is the first of many meetings I plan to have with Members of Congress, Republican and Democrat. It is my intention that we establish a consistent and meaningful dialogue, put partisanship aside and accomplish the country's business.
- We – The White House and the Congress – have a lot of work to do on education, on Medicare reform, on taxes. I suggest we get right to it.

(Press Departs)

- Thank you again for coming down.
- I do plan to spend a lot of time with you.
- I'd like to talk about my agenda, get your thoughts, and talk about how we can best work together.

READING ROUNDTABLE:

January 22, 2001
THE WHITE HOUSE
ROOSEVELT ROOM
1:05PM
FROM: MARGARET LA MONTAGNE

I. PURPOSE

The Roundtable will underscore that practicing research-based reading instruction works and proves that the President's proposals for reading are necessary and attainable.

II. BACKGROUND

Many of the participants in this roundtable discussion have been conducting reading research, which reinforces the need for the President's proposals. Other participants are currently involved in the implementation of that research as school practitioners.

III. PARTICIPANTS

Please see attached.

IV. PRESS PLAN

Pool coverage during the last fifteen minutes of the event.

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

- 12:30pm Participants gather at the White House gate and proceed to the Roosevelt Room.
- 12:45-1:05pm Participants are seated at the table. Reid Lyon briefs the group on the nature of the discussion to follow.
- 1:05-1:50 President and Mrs. Bush arrive. Reid Lyon facilitates discussion of reading research. The President makes brief remarks at the end of the discussion.

Remarks for Conclusion of the Reading Event
Monday, January 22, 2001

- We had a terrific meeting today with reading experts and the teachers and practitioners who are putting them into practice.
- I want people to know that education will be my priority as President. We must make sure that no child will be left behind in America.
- I am committed to giving every American child the best possible start toward the American dream by teaching every child to read. We are going to have high standards. But we are going to prepare children to meet those standards. We want them to succeed, and we will take practical steps so everyone begins the accountability system on an equal footing.
- My plan will provide added resources to help states and local districts, especially confronting the issue we were discussing today – to make sure every child can read.
- We face a national emergency: too many of our children cannot read, particularly our disadvantaged students.
- In the highest poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth graders could not read at basic level in 1998.
- Reading is the gateway to learning and the foundation for all other education reform. We cannot allow ourselves to become two nations -- one that reads, and one that can't. As my friend Phyllis Hunter says, "Reading is the new civil right."
- I am looking forward to working with Congress to pass a comprehensive reading initiative, based on what science tells us works in teaching our children to read.
 - Includes diagnostic tests to identify early reading problems in K-2.
 - Establish a curriculum based on sound research, including phonics.
 - Intensive training for teachers of early grades.
 - Intervention and extra help for those having trouble reading, including summer school and after school programs.
- I have asked these experts joining me today to join me in this effort.
