Statement

McVeigh Statement
June 11, 2001
Draft #7

01 JUN 5 PM 8:54

This morning, the United States of America carried out the severest sentence for the gravest of crimes. The victims of the Oklahoma City bombing have been given, not vengeance, but justice. And one young man met the fate he chose for himself six years ago.

For the survivors of the crime, and for the families of the dead, the pain goes on. Final punishment of the guilty cannot alone bring peace to the innocent. It cannot recover the loss, or balance the scales. And it is not meant to do so. But tonight, every living person who was hurt by the evil done in Oklahoma City can rest in the knowledge that there has been a reckoning.

At every point – from the morning of April 19, 1995 to this very hour – we have seen the good that overcomes evil. We saw it in the rescuers, who saved and suffered with the victims. We have seen it in a community that has grieved, and held close the memory of the lost. We have seen it in the work of detectives, marshals, and police. And we have seen it in the courts. Due process ruled. The case was proved. The verdict was calmly reached. And the rights of the accused were protected and observed – to the full, and to the end.

Under the laws of our country, the matter is concluded. There are some things about it that we will never understand. Life and history bring tragedies, and often they cannot be explained. But they can be redeemed. They are redeemed by dispensing justice, though eternal justice is not ours to deliver ... by remembering those who grieve, including now the young man's mother, father, and sisters ... and by trusting in purposes greater than our own. May God in His mercy grant peace to all – to the lives that were taken six years ago, to the lives that go on, and to the life that ended today.

INTERVIEWS WITH FOREIGN PRINT AND BROADCAST JOURNALISTS

Monday, June 11, 2001

8:40 a.m. - 9:40 a.m.

Old Family Dining Room/Library

Condoleezza Rice/Karen Hughes

I. PURPOSE

You will participate in two distinct interviews with foreign print and broadcast journalists from Europe to preview your trip to Europe on June 11-16, 2001. These interviews will provide you with an opportunity to underscore the high priority your Administration places on working with allies and friends to build a Europe whole, free, and at peace; and to communicate U.S. views on issues such as missile defense, climate change, NATO enlargement, and trade directly to European audiences.

II. BACKGROUND

To accommodate the numerous requests for interviews you have received from the foreign press, you will be meeting with eight print journalists from the United Kingdom, Germany, Italy, France, Sweden, Poland, Spain, and Russia; and six television journalists from Belgium (Flemish and French-language broadcasters), Poland, Sweden, Slovenia, and Russia. Your roundtable interview with print journalists will address the broad themes of the trip and issues of concern across Europe, not country-specific parochial questions. The very short one-on-one television interviews will offer you the chance to make remarks tailored to the publics of the countries you will visit.

IV. PRESS PLAN

White House Photographer
State Department Television Crew

V. SEQUENCE

For the first session, you will enter the Old Family Dining Room to greet and pose for a photograph with each print correspondent. After all are seated, the journalists will ask questions in rotation for about 30 minutes.

You will then depart the Old Family Dining Room for the Library. You will sit in the same location with one television crew, while each correspondent comes to you. You will grant each correspondent an exclusive three-minute, one-on-one television interview. A two-minute break between each session will allow a cordial introduction and photo with each reporter.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS FOR EUROPEAN ROUNDTABLE INTERVIEW

OVERALL

What are your goals from this trip?

- Reaffirmation of partnership with Europe with common goal: spreading security, democracy, and prosperity to the entire continent and reaching beyond to address serious global concerns, such as the Middle East and Africa.
- At NATO, will address key issues: NATO enlargement, European Security and Defense Policy (the relationship between NATO and Europe's planned rapid reaction force), the new strategic framework/missile defense, and the Balkans/Southeast Europe.
- At EU Summit: Hope to reaffirm our Transatlantic partnership; point towards a less contentious manner to resolve issues on which we disagree; and look outward to common global agenda, including expanded trade, struggle against infectious diseases, and cooperation to resolve or ease regional conflicts.
- With Spain, Poland: Want to affirm strong alliance with two emerging and important European powers and strong American Allies. Spain is a model of democratic, free market transformation; partner in Latin America. Look forward to celebrating Poland's achievements since 1989; talking about cooperation to spread Poland's success; charting course ahead.

- With Putin, will discuss vision of the overall relationship; and look forward to hearing Putin's. Hope Putin will understand that the United States seeks positive, constructive relationship with Russia: one in which we will be clear and forthright about differences. We'll discuss how to make this relationship work -- through contacts on strategic issues, economic and energy issues, and regional issues.

How would you characterize U.S.-European relations on the eve of your trip?

- Ours is a deep, strong relationship based on common values, shared history, and common goals.
- Overall, relations are excellent, but we have to be careful not to take each other for granted.
- Sometimes disputes in certain specific areas, such as trade, divert our focus from broader objectives.
- Want to make sure the United States and Europe keep focused on what's most important, namely working together to continue expanding democracy and prosperity in Europe and throughout the world.

There is a widely reported perception that the United States has become increasingly isolated internationally on a wide range of issues: on climate change, the CTBT, missile defense, and the death penalty. Is the United States deliberately adopting a unilateralist posture toward the international community?

- In globalized world, “unilateralism” makes as little sense as “isolationism.” We need our Allies and friends, and to listen closely to what our friends tell us.
- We and Europe have occasional differences. That is only natural given breadth of ties. But that which unites Europe and America far, far outweighs our differences.
- As I made very clear during campaign, I will not hesitate to take positions in support of American principles and American interests.
- Sometimes taking a position that is not yet universally accepted is called leadership.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

The EU member states have abolished the death penalty, as have many other countries around the world. The United States is one of the last developed countries using it. And you as Governor of Texas ordered the execution of many people. Isn't it time to abandon capital punishment?

- The United States is an open and transparent society functioning under the rule of law. Capital punishment is the freely and democratically arrived at choice of the federal government and a majority of our states. The vigorous public debate in this country on capital punishment is testament to this fact.

- Some people in U.S. oppose capital punishment and many people in Europe favor capital punishment. You have arrived at your decision regarding capital punishment in a democratic way, and Americans have arrived at theirs, also in a democratic way.
- The United States limits capital punishment to the most serious crimes and we fully respect the requirements of due process. With those important safeguards, we fully comply with our obligations under international law.

MIDDLE EAST

Will the U.S. discuss working together in the Middle East?

- We appreciate Europe's efforts in support of Middle East peace. In the last week since the horrible bombing in Tel Aviv, we have been in constant contact with the EU and others to coordinate our efforts to keep the cease-fire going there.
- To name one historical example, Spain hosted the 1991 Madrid Conference that launched the simultaneous bilateral and multilateral tracks of the Middle East peace process. In 1995, during its EU Presidency, Spain started the "Barcelona Process," which resembles our U.S.-North Africa Economic Partnership.
- So the EU as a whole and individual countries have contributed a great deal to efforts to achieve peace in the Middle East.

NATO ENLARGEMENT

What is your position on NATO enlargement?

- Further steps on enlargement will be reviewed at NATO's Prague Summit in 2002.
- The United States strongly supports the NATO enlargement process, that includes all European democracies able and willing to meet the obligations of membership.
- No country excluded from consideration because of history or geography. No veto by third country.
- But NATO membership is not an entitlement. Aspiring members must demonstrate they are ready to meet the obligations of membership. Each aspirant will be assessed based on its own performance-based record, including with respect to NATO's Membership Action Plan.

MISSILE DEFENSE

What is the latest development, and how have the consultations around the globe shaped U.S. thinking?

- We are in the middle of a process of consultations. We have discussed our ongoing strategic review and current thinking on a new concept of deterrence and a new framework for strategic security, which includes missile defenses.
- We are pleased with the consultations we have had and regard these consultations as an important part of our commitment to work closely with our allies and friends.

- There is a growing recognition of the threat posed by the spread of the technology for weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles, as reflected in language of last NATO communiqué adopted in Budapest.
- NATO Communiqué, which we liked, explicitly recognized the increased threat facing allies from WMD and missiles which it said was "...a matter of serious concern for the Alliance as it poses risks to international and regional security and can pose a direct military threat to Allies..." It also called for NATO to adapt its defense posture to counter this threat, including working jointly on theater missile defense.

TRADE DISPUTES

The United States seems to have an increasing number of trade disputes with the EU. What can be done about preventing such impasses over trade issues?

- The U.S.-EU economic relationship is the largest in the world, with trade and investment flows of $1.4 trillion a year. This is a period of remarkable economic integration: mega-mergers across the Atlantic are common. Disputes represent a tiny fraction of those flows.
- Our recent agreement on the WTO banana dispute demonstrates our ability to resolve thorny problems and we hope to build on this success to tackle other difficult issues.
- We are also working with the EU directly to improve our ability to identify those issues that have the potential of creating bilateral disputes.

NEW WTO ROUND

Does the United States support a new WTO Round and how will you persuade others to go along?

- The United States supports further multilateral trade liberalization through both regional agreements and the launch of a new WTO Round. A new Round will be an engine for growth and bring benefits to all trading countries on every continent.
- Each of us has a "wish list" for an ideal negotiation, but we need to look for areas of compromise internationally in order to forge a consensus.
- There's no question we have to find ways to increase the poorest countries' stake in, and benefits from, the trading system. Capacity building and programs to ensure effective implementation are reasonable issues.

STEEL

The United States is considering special protections for its steel industry. How can you defend such action in view of the objectives of the WTO, which the United States claims to endorse? Have you consulted with the EU about the effects on EU steel exports?

- U.S. imports of steel products were at near-record levels in 2000, creating hardship for steel producers and workers.
- My Administration is considering a number of options for addressing this issue in accordance with WTO rules.

- We want to work with the EU and other trading partners to address the persistent global overcapacity in this industry and to correct for decades of subsidization.

CUBA/HELMS-BURTON/SOL MELIA

What is the status of the Helms-Burton sanctions against Sol Melia? The European Union has threatened retaliation should the U.S. implement this law against the Spanish hotel chain.

- I can't comment on the specifics of this case because it is under legal review.
- But I can say we have a number of reviews underway under Helms-Burton Title IV and some companies have been notified of these reviews. The notification allows these companies to present any countervailing information they may have in the case. Obviously, we do not release information on companies where we are continuing to review the facts.
- While we may sometimes disagree on tactics, the U.S. and Europe and all democratic governments, I think, share the same goal of promoting a transition to a democratic government in Cuba. We are developing an international consensus on the need to promote democracy and human rights in Cuba and the importance of respecting property rights on a worldwide basis.

CLIMATE CHANGE

What will you say to the European allies about climate change? Will you have something to deliver?

- [Will need up to date answer on June 8.]

EU ENLARGEMENT

What concerns do you have about EU enlargement?

- The United States favors European Union membership for the candidate countries. EU enlargement will promote stability, prosperity, and democracy throughout Europe.
- The United States enjoys excellent economic and political ties to both member and non-member European states. A choice for EU accession is not a choice away from the United States. All EU members are friends or allies of the United States.
- As the enlargement process moves forward, it is our expectation that it will be done in an open and transparent manner that benefits our mutual economic relationship.
- As enlargement proceeds, we will continue to work closely with both the EU and the candidates.

ESDP

Are you satisfied with the EU's progress in addressing U.S. concerns regarding the EU's European Security and Defense Policy (ESDP), including the development of NATO-EU links? Are capabilities going to be developed that enhance rather than detract from NATO's abilities?

- United States welcomes a capable European force, properly integrated with NATO, that provides new options for handling crises when NATO chooses not to lead.
- Such a force will require EU members to provide the resources necessary to create real capabilities, without waste or duplication.
- Such a force must be inclusive, so that all allies who wish to contribute are as fully involved as possible.
- Our security is indivisible. So must be our cooperation in this effort. We must work together, and I welcome the prospect of a strong NATO-EU partnership.

LEVEL OF U.S.-EU COOPERATION IN SOUTHEAST EUROPE

You mentioned U.S.-EU cooperation in Southeast Europe. Are you really pleased with the level of cooperation to date? What are you actually doing together to support positive change in the region?

- The United States and the EU have coordinated closely and effectively in support of the Macedonian government. We strongly support Mr. Solana's leadership in facilitating a political solution to the volatile situation there.
- Last year U.S.-EU cooperation in the region helped the people of Serbia oust Slobodan Milosevic and begin the democratic transition currently under way in Yugoslavia.

- The Stability Pact is an important component of our cooperation with the European Union to promote peace and stability in Southeast Europe and to further integrate the region into European and trans-Atlantic institutions. It is an important vehicle for fostering regional cooperation and as a mechanism for coordinating assistance. We look forward to working with the EU to make this mechanism more effective and focused.
- Current priorities for the Stability Pact are the promotion of free trade and investment, combating corruption and organized crime, fostering interethnic dialogue and cross-border cooperation, and increased cooperation between countries of the region and NATO.

PUTIN

Will you get President Putin's understanding on Missile Defense?

- First let me say, we will discuss much more than missile defense. Russia is a great nation and we can have a very important relationship. But won't be same Cold War relationship. I want to look Putin in the eye and say you are not my enemy.
- I expect missile defense discussion to be candid and constructive. I want to review the WMD and missile threat, and responses to that threat, including nonproliferation and counter-proliferation measures, as well as the need for a new concept of deterrence that includes missile defenses.
- We have been clear with Russia: our interest in cooperation is serious. It is in our mutual interest to counter these new threats. We want to get beyond reliving the past and move together to a new future, but we are committed to moving forward without Russia if necessary. Given the threats of today, it is imperative that we defend our forces and our territory against missile attacks.

Will you offer Putin economic aid?

- Russia doesn't need aid. Russia needs increased trade and investment. President Putin has indicated this himself on numerous occasions.
- We are prepared to engage actively with the Russians on measures that can be taken to improve the investment climate, that will bring significant economic benefit to the Russian people.

Any reaction to repeated reports of Russian atrocities in Chechnya?

- These reports are disturbing. They underscore the necessity of Russian authorities ensuring that their forces respect human rights and are held accountable for violations.
- The Russian Government cannot separate its actions in Chechnya from its expressed desires for full integration into the community of democratic nations.

Could you give us some examples of where we are cooperating with Russia?

- Russia has been helpful in the Middle East, and in the Balkans.
- We are cooperating quite well in the area of terrorism. U.S. and Russian officials have held several rounds of bilateral consultations regarding Afghanistan.

- The United States and Russia agree that the situation in Afghanistan, especially the Taliban leadership's support for terrorism, continues to threaten the interests of both countries as well as regional and international stability.
- We, and our two co-chairs in the Minsk group, Russia and France, continue to work with the Governments of Armenia and Azerbaijan to advance peace in Nagorno-Karabakh.

What will you say about press freedoms in Russia?

- Independent media are essential to democracy. We will urge the Russian Government to respect the gains which Russian independent media have made over the past decade.
- The Russian Government cannot separate its actions against the independent media from its expressed desires for full integration into the community of democratic nations.

FOREIGN TELEVISION -- SPAIN

Do you have a message for the people of Spain?

- Spain is an increasingly influential actor on the European and global stage. I look forward to expressing our appreciation not only for Spain's support on crucial European security issues, such as the Balkans and NATO enlargement, but also for our growing cooperation in the Mediterranean, Latin America, and elsewhere.
- My first trip to Europe is aimed at reaffirming our joint vision of a Europe whole, free, and at peace, building on NATO as the anchor of transatlantic security and on the U.S.-EU partnership for security and prosperity. We seek to enlarge the sphere of freedom and democracy. I am also looking forward to my first meeting with President Putin and developing a constructive relationship with Russia.

FOREIGN TELEVISION -- BELGIUM

Do you have a message for the people of Belgium?

- We appreciate Belgium's strong support within NATO and its influential role as the unofficial "capital of Europe." The United States looks forward to close cooperation with Brussels during Belgium's EU Presidency starting July 1.

FOREIGN TELEVISION -- SWEDEN*Do you have a message for the people of Sweden?

- I am proud to be the first serving U.S. President ever to visit Sweden. Millions of Americans trace their ancestry to Sweden, whose emigrants did so much to make our country strong. I congratulate Sweden on a successful EU Presidency, and look forward to meeting your leaders as well as all the leaders of the European Union in Goteborg.

FOREIGN TELEVISION -- POLAND*Do you have a message for the people of Poland?

- Poland inspires the world with its successful reemergence over the past decade as a vibrant democracy and influential economic actor in Europe. I look forward to seeing Warsaw, congratulating the people of Poland on their accomplishments, and to express our appreciation in person for Polish support in NATO.
- My first trip to Europe is aimed at reaffirming our joint vision of a Europe whole, free, and at peace, building on NATO as the anchor of transatlantic security and on the U.S.-EU partnership for security and prosperity. We seek to enlarge the sphere of freedom and democracy. I am also looking forward to my first meeting with President Putin and developing a constructive relationship with Russia.

FOREIGN TELEVISION -- SLOVENIA*Do you have a message for the people of Slovenia?

- Slovenia should be very proud of its record of political and economic accomplishments over a very short period. My message: don't stop now, keep reforming! I look forward to congratulating your leaders and reaffirming U.S. support for the full integration of Southeast Europe into European institutions. I am also grateful for Slovenia's willingness to host my first meeting with Russia's President.

SPAIN

- Me alegro mucho tener la oportunidad de ir a Espana y conecer su pueblo.
- Existen lazos profundos entre nuestros paises.
- No solo porque cooperamos en temas importantes internacionales, sino tambien por la cultura y lengua espanola que compartimos.
- Support the Spanish government's vigorous efforts to combat ETA terrorism.
- Spain's role in Central America crucial to moving region away from civil war and toward democracy.
- Appreciate Spain's support of Middle East peace.

Other issues: Climate Change, Missile Defense, ESDP

- QUESTIONS SUBMITTED BY SPANISH TV

It is the impression of Europe that the United States might be headed toward isolationism. Will your trip change that impression?

- I hope so, because that impression is wrong. We remain actively engaged on a wide range of issues with the international community, both bilaterally and through multilateral organizations. In doing so, we do not hesitate to take positions in support of our principals and interests. It is certainly not the intention of the United States to be isolated on any issue. We think the United States ought to play a prominent role in the international community, and we want to do so. It is in the best interests of the community, and in our best interests.

What were your feelings before visiting Spain? About making contact with the country, the government and the King? Do you believe that a special relationship has developed beyond diplomacy? [could you respond in Spanish?]

- Me alegro mucho tener la oportunidad de ir a Espana y coner su pueblo.
- Existen lazos profundos entre nuestros paises.
- No solo porque cooperamos en temas importantes internacionales, sino tambien por la cultura y lengua espanola que compartimos.

[I am really looking forward to visiting Spain and meeting its leaders. I believe there are special bonds between our two countries, not only because we work together on so many important issues, but also because of our deep cultural ties and because Spanish is such an important language in the United States.]

Terrorism is the main worry in Spain. What do you think can be done in the international sphere?

- ETA is a terrorist organization. We will continue to work with Spain and others to support the Spanish government's vigorous efforts to combat ETA terrorism and bring the perpetrators of these brutal and cowardly attacks to justice.

Is a consensus between Europe and the United States possible after having abandoned the Kyoto commitment?

- I am a firm believer that there can be different approaches to solving a common problem. We recognize that climate change is a serious issue, and we intend to work closely with Europe to develop effective measures to address greenhouse gas emissions. [insert latest guidance]

Do you think an autonomous European army, collaborating with NATO but also operating by itself, is possible?

- The United States welcomes a capable European force, properly integrated with NATO, that provides new options for handling crises when NATO chooses not to lead.
- Such a force will require EU members to provide the resources necessary to create real capabilities, without waste or duplication.
- And such a force must be inclusive, so that all allies who wish to contribute are as fully involved as possible.
- Our security is indivisible. We must work together, and I welcome the prospect of a strong NATO-EU partnership.

Should the United States and Europe play a bigger role in the Middle East conflict to promote peace?

- I expect to discuss this with European leaders in an effort to help end the violence and resume a process of negotiations. We appreciate Spain's support of Middle East peace efforts.
- Spain hosted the 1991 Madrid Conference that launched the simultaneous bilateral and multilateral tracks of the Middle East peace process. In 1995, during its EU Presidency, Spain started the "Barcelona Process," which resembles our U.S.-North Africa Economic Partnership.
- Today, King Juan Carlos and President Aznar maintain close and productive contacts with many leaders in the region.

Spain is very involved in Latin America. How do you see the consolidation of democracy in the continent? Is Plan Colombia working?

- Today, all the countries in Latin America except one have taken the democratic path--in contrast to a different situation that prevailed 10-15 years ago.
- Spain has played an important role in this process -- your role in Central America was crucial to moving that region away from civil war and toward democracy.
- Plan Colombia is a comprehensive plan drawn up by the Colombians themselves. It calls for social and economic development, a peaceful resolution to Colombia's conflict, and institutional reform, including strengthened and more efficient law enforcement and military structures respectful of human rights.
- To complement Plan Colombia there has been growing emphasis on a regional strategy involving all the countries in the area. In Quebec City I pledged $882 million for this effort.

Don't you think that opening the markets and permitting North American tourism would open the mentalities and the end of excuses in Cuba?

- Our Cuba policy, including the embargo, is based on a bipartisan consensus that spans more than four decades.
- Others have tried the path of commercial engagement with the Cuban government. It has achieved little or nothing in terms of promoting a transition to democracy or improving respect for human rights in Cuba.
- U.S. sanctions on Cuba will remain in place as long as President Fidel Castro is in power. Once Castro departs and a transition to democracy is underway, then the U.S. and Cuba could have a normalized relationship.

BELGIUM

(Flemish and French language TV)

- look forward to close cooperation with Brussels during Belgium's EU Presidency (from July 1)
- Discuss with Prime Minister Verhofstadt how to advance vision of Europe whole, free and at peace
- And share blessings of liberty with countries less fortunate, Africa

Euro Currency

- US has always supported European integration. Euro, backed by a strong European economy, will contribute to global financial stability and prosperity.

Climate Change, Death Penalty, ESDP*

QUESTIONS SUBMITTED BY BELGIAN TV

What do you expect from the Belgian EU Presidency?

- I look forward to close cooperation with Brussels during Belgium's EU Presidency starting July 1.
- I will be discussing with Prime Minister Verhofstadt ways in which the United States and the EU can work together to advance our joint vision of a Europe whole, free and at peace, and also to share the blessings of liberty and prosperity that we enjoy with other countries around the world that are not so fortunate -- in Africa, for example.

Why did you reverse the U.S. position on the Kyoto agreement and are you surprised by the outcry in Europe?

- Anyone who has followed U.S. policy on climate change knows that we have long had serious difficulties with many aspects of Kyoto, as have European countries and others.
- I am a firm believer that there can be different approaches to solving a common problem. We recognize that climate change is a serious issue, and we intend to work closely with Europe to develop effective measures to address greenhouse gas emissions. [insert latest guidance]

Won't missile defense mean the end of the ABM Treaty and resulting instability?

- We need a new framework that allows us to build missile defenses to counter the different threats of today's world. To do so, we must move beyond the constraints of the 30 year old ABM Treaty. It does not recognize the present or point us to the future; it enshrines the past.

- This new framework must encourage further cuts in nuclear weapons, and strengthen proliferation controls. Our ongoing consultations on missile defense are an important part of our commitment to work closely with our allies and friends on these matters.

What is your position on the new European "army?"

- The United States welcomes a capable European force, properly integrated with NATO, that provides new options for handling crises when NATO chooses not to lead.
- Such a force will require EU members to provide the resources necessary to create real capabilities, without waste or duplication.
- And such a force must be inclusive, so that all allies who wish to contribute are as fully involved as possible.
- Our security is indivisible. We must work together, and I welcome the prospect of a strong NATO-EU partnership.

Don't you feel the list of conflicts between the United States and the European Union is growing?

- The U.S.-EU economic relationship is the largest in the world, with trade and investment flows of $1.4 trillion a year. This is a period of remarkable economic integration: mega-mergers across the Atlantic are common. The areas of dispute represent a tiny fraction of those flows.
- Our recent agreement on the WTO banana dispute demonstrates our ability to resolve thorny problems and we hope to build on this success to tackle other difficult issues and prevent new ones from arising.
- More broadly, ours is a mature partnership in which disagreements will naturally arise and be discussed frankly and openly; but I am convinced that our common values, shared history and common goals in terms of making Europe whole and free will help us to keep these disputes in proper perspective. There is much more that unites us than divides us.

Do you welcome the arrival of the euro currency?

- United States has always supported European integration. The Euro backed by a strong European economy will contribute to global financial stability and prosperity. (Cleared by Mark Sobel, Acting A/S Treasury.)

"Echelon" is reported to involve using U.S. intelligence assets to support industrial espionage by the United States on Europe -- do you think spying on European citizens is legitimate?

- The National Security Agency collects foreign signals intelligence to fulfill national requirements as determined by myself, senior U.S. Government policy makers and U.S. military leaders.
- NSA is not authorized to provide intelligence information to private firms for their economic advantage.

The United States executed Timothy McVeigh today. European nations have abandoned the death penalty as barbaric. Why does the United States continue?

- The United States is an open and transparent society functioning under the rule of law. Capital punishment is the freely and democratically arrived at choice of the federal government and a majority of our states. The vigorous public debate in this country on capital punishment is testament to this fact.
- Some people in the U.S. oppose capital punishment. A significant number of people in Europe favor capital punishment. Your elected leaders arrived their decision regarding capital punishment in a democratic way, and Americans have arrived at our decision, also in a democratic way.

- The United States limits capital punishment to the most serious crimes and we fully respect the requirements of due process. With those important safeguards, we fully comply with our obligations under international law.

SWEDEN

- Relations with Sweden excellent.
- Cooperate closely on European security from the Balkans to the Baltics. Also on issues such as North Korea, your Prime Minister just visited.

Annika Ostberg (murder) case

- Prisoner transfers between Sweden and U.S. governed by a Council of Europe convention.
- U.S. has not agreed because California has not agreed. Want assurance she will serve as long in Sweden.

Other issues: Climate Change, Middle East, Your reception in Europe.

QUESTIONS SUBMITTED BY SWEDISH TV

Do you have a plan ready to present to your European counterparts to address climate change/global warming?

- I am a firm believer that there can be different approaches to solving a common problem. We recognize that climate change is a serious issue, and we intend to work closely with Europe to develop effective measures to address greenhouse gas emissions. [need latest guidance]

Your approval ratings are falling here. "Candidate" Bush received a lot of bad publicity. You have not spent much time in Europe. What are your feelings before meeting the "angry" Europeans?

- I hope they don't stay angry long. I am looking forward to meeting them and to reaffirming our joint vision of a Europe whole, free and at peace -- building on NATO as the anchor of transatlantic security and on the U.S.-EU partnership for security and prosperity.
- The U.S.-EU economic relationship is the largest in the world, with trade and investment flows of $1.4 trillion a year. The areas of dispute represent a tiny fraction of those flows.
- More broadly, ours is a mature partnership in which disagreements will naturally arise and be discussed frankly and openly; but I am convinced that our common values, shared history and common goals in terms of making Europe whole and free will help us to keep these disputes in proper perspective. There is much more that unites us than divides us.

It seems like various parties are calling for a resolute U.S. initiative to ease the crisis in the Middle East. Does the Bush White House keep too low a profile? Does it show a lack of responsibility in these difficult times?

- The United States is deeply engaged in efforts to end the violence and help the parties resume a process of negotiations. Working closely with our friends in Europe and elsewhere, we think our profile is just about right at the moment, but we are prepared to engage in any way that will be effective.

Sweden during the 70's and the Vietnam War era was considered very left wing by Washington and relations weren't very good. What do you know about Sweden, how do you view Sweden today, is there room for improvement in U.S.-Swedish relations?

- A lot has changed since the Cold War, and I am glad to say that U.S. relations with Sweden today are excellent. We cooperate closely on important issues in European security from the Balkans to the Baltics, and also on issues such as North Korea, which your Prime Minister just visited.
- Sweden's influential international role has been reaffirmed through its very successful Presidency of the European Union. And you'll see plenty of Volvos on our streets. Millions of Americans trace their ancestry to Sweden, and I am proud to be the first American President to visit Sweden while in office.

Annika Ostberg is one unsettled question between our countries: this is the case of a Swedish woman who has served about 20 years in jail in California after being convicted of murder. Swedish authorities have claimed humanitarian grounds for her transfer to Sweden, and have referred to the agreement between Sweden and the United States on transfer of prisoners. When can she be transferred to Sweden so she can serve out the remainder of her terms in the land of her birth?

- Prisoner transfers between Sweden and the United States are governed by the Council of Europe Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons.

- The United States has the right to withhold consent pursuant to a formal 1997 Reservation and Declaration submitted by the United States to the Convention.
- The United States has not consented to her transfer because the State of California has not consented. California will not consent to prisoner transfers unless the receiving country provides assurances that the prisoner would serve the same length of sentence as he or she would in California.

POLAND

- Inspires world with successful reemergence as vibrant democracy and influential economic actor in Europe.
- Congratulate your leaders on their accomplishments, and express appreciation for Poland's strong support in NATO.
- Long been friends: now allies. Allies pledge each other full commitment and support -- this America offers Poland.
- Poland symbolizes old Cold War dividing lines are disappearing. Poland playing a crucial role in creating a Europe that is whole, free and at peace. Responsible stances taken as new NATO ally a major contribution.

Other issues: Missile Defense

QUESTIONS SUBMITTED BY POLISH TV

Why choose to visit Poland for your first trip to Europe?

- Poland inspires the world with its successful reemergence over the past decade as a vibrant democracy and influential economic actor in Europe.
- I wanted to congratulate your leaders on their accomplishments, and express our appreciation for Poland's strong support in NATO.

What can you, as the President of the United States, can offer to Poland now? And what do you expect from Poland?

- America and Poland have long been friends; we are now also allies. Allies pledge to each other their full commitment and support, and that is what America offers Poland.
- We expect only the same from Poland -- and we are getting it. Our relationship is closer than ever, and spans the full range of political, economic and cultural affairs.

What role might Poland play in relations between West and East, between NATO and former Soviet republics?

- Poland symbolizes the fact that the old Cold War dividing lines are disappearing. Poland is now playing a crucial role in helping America and Europe create a Europe that is whole, free and at peace. The responsible stances it has taken as a new NATO ally have been a major contribution.

Poland is one of the strongest supporters of the American missile defense plans but there are some doubts. Will the MD system include European countries and Poland as well?

- NATO foreign ministers recently agreed in Budapest that NATO must adapt its defense posture to counter new threats posed by the spread of technology for weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles, including working jointly on theater missile defense.
- Our ongoing consultations on missile defense are an important part of our commitment to work closely with our allies and friends on these matters.

What do you find challenging about the office of the President?

- I am humbled by the degree to which countries around the world look to the United States for leadership -- this places a special responsibility on us to work hard to live up to those expectations.

SLOVENIA

- Grateful to Slovenia hosting first meeting with Russia's President. I also look forward to meeting Slovenia's leaders.
- Message is Slovenia should be very proud of record of political and economic accomplishments over very short time. Keep reforming!
- Discuss NATO expansion with Allies in Brussels this week. But next steps will be reviewed at NATO's Prague Summit in 2002.
- US committed to NATO operations in Balkans. Not draw down our forces precipitously or unilaterally.
- Ultimate objective to bring whole region into European mainstream; European countries assume increased share of leadership, responsibility

Other issues: Missile Defense; ESDP; US-Russian cooperation.

- QUESTIONS SUBMITTED BY SLOVENIAN TV

What is the message in choosing Slovenia as a site of your first meeting with Russian President Putin?

- I am grateful for Slovenia's willingness to host my first meeting with Russia's President. And I also look forward to meeting Slovenia's leaders.
- My message is that Slovenia should be very proud of its record of political and economic accomplishments over a very short time. Don't stop now; keep reforming!

Slovenia anticipates American support in its efforts to become a member of NATO. When do you think NATO expansion could happen and which countries might be included in this?

- I will be discussing NATO expansion with Allies in Brussels this week. Next steps on enlargement will be reviewed at NATO's Prague Summit in 2002.
- I strongly support the NATO enlargement process. The door must remain open to all European democracies able and willing to meet the obligations of membership. Each aspirant will be assessed based on its own performance in meeting the criteria for membership.

Europe is skeptical about plans to build a missile defense. Russia sees this as a threat. What is your answer to those who are reluctant about this American strategic plan?

- My answer is that responsible leaders have an obligation to deal with threats as they evolve, and we do face new threats from the spread of technology for weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles.
- The Cold War, with its threat of mutual assured destruction, is over. I am determined to work with allies and friends to develop a new comprehensive strategic framework that includes not just missile defense but also stronger proliferation controls and reductions in offensive weapons.

- Our ongoing consultations on missile defense are an important part of our commitment to work closely with our allies and friends on these matters.

How do you see future cooperation between the U.S. and Russia?

- The Cold War is over and Russia stopped being our enemy years ago. I am glad to have the opportunity to discuss with President Putin my vision for security in the 21st century and to tell him in person of my interest in building a positive, constructive relationship with Russia.
- We know there will be areas of cooperation and also areas where we have serious difference. I hope we can discuss both in an open and frank manner. I look forward to getting this important dialogue underway.

Washington has sent mixed signals about the U.S. military presence in the Balkans. How long and in what size will American troops be willing to stay in the Balkans?

- We remain committed to NATO operations in Bosnia and Kosovo and will not draw down our forces precipitously or unilaterally. As Secretary Powell has said, we and our allies went in together and will come out together.
- My Administration's ultimate objective is to bring the whole region into the European mainstream with European countries and institutions assuming an increasing share of the leadership and responsibility.

Radio Address by the President and the First Lady
June 16, 2001 (Father's Day)
Draft #6

The First Lady speaks first, followed by the President:

Thank you, Laura. Many Americans believe that their father is the finest man they have ever known. That is certainly true in my case. My dad provided me with life's greatest gift: unconditional love. And he still makes sure all his children know how much he loves us.

Fathers are so important in the lives of children. They provide love and encouragement. They are the object of a young child's admiration. And they provide their sons and daughters with an example of what it means to be a good man.

When fathers are absent, children are often lost to a world of hopelessness and hardship. Our laws should promote responsible fatherhood – and so our Administration strongly supports community-based fatherhood programs. We are taking steps to make adoption more affordable. And for innocent children who are born into fractured families, we provide support for mentoring programs.

Ultimately fatherhood is a deeply personal calling. Our own children are given to our care, and they depend on our love. Every parent knows that raising children is not easy. But it is among the most hopeful and affirming experiences a human being will ever know. So many of my generation had the same experience: When we held our children for the first time, we found ourselves. We found a world of duty and love that changed our lives. And since that day, “Dad” has been the most important title I have ever held, or will ever hold.

Laura and I wish all of the fathers listening a happy Father's Day. So many of you provide to your children daily care and guidance, nurture and protection, discipline and love – and it is making a world of difference. On behalf of them, we want to express our appreciation.

Thank you for listening.
