Radio Address
November 13, 2002
Draft #4

02 NOV 14 11:09

Good Morning.

This was a productive week in the war against terror – both at home and abroad.

Congress returned to Washington with renewed energy and a commitment to make progress on key issues. Members of the House and Senate reached a crucial agreement to create a new Department of Homeland Security. When Congress votes on the final legislation, America will have a single agency with the full-time duty of protecting our people against attack.

This new department will focus and unify responsibilities that are now spread out among dozens of government agencies. The Customs Service, the INS, the Coast Guard, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the Transportation Security Administration, and many others will report to the new Secretary of Homeland Security. The department will significantly improve our ability to protect our borders, our coasts, and our communities. It will pull together the best intelligence information, and coordinate our response. The new department will help develop the technology America needs to detect and defeat chemical, biological, and nuclear threats. And under the agreement reached this week, I will have the authority and flexibility to move people and resources to where they are needed – without bureaucratic rules and lengthy labor negotiations.

This compromise is the result of months of hard work and negotiation, and it will take additional time to put the agreement into place. The threat of terror will be with us for years to come, and we remain resolved to see this conflict through to its end. In the Department of Homeland Security, we will have good people – well organized, and well equipped – working day and night to oppose the serious dangers of our time.

Now that we have reached broad agreement on a homeland security bill, I look forward to signing it into law as soon as possible.

We are committed to defending the Nation. Yet wars are not won on the defensive. The best way to keep America safe from terrorism is to go after terrorists where they plan and hide. And that work goes on around the world.

The United States is working with more than 90 countries to disrupt and defeat terror networks. So far, we have frozen more than 113 million dollars in terrorist assets – denying them the means to finance their murder. We have cracked down on charities that were exploiting American compassion to fund terrorists. We have deployed troops to Afghanistan, the Philippines, Yemen, the former Soviet republic of Georgia, and other nations where terrorists have gathered. We have captured and interrogated thousands of terrorists – while others have met their fate in caves and mountains. We are sending a clear message to the enemies of freedom: No terrorist will escape the patient justice of America.

To win the war on terror, we are also opposing the growing threat of weapons of mass destruction in the hands of outlaw regimes. This week the dictator of Iraq told the UN that he would give weapons inspectors unrestricted access to his country. We have heard such pledges before – and they have been uniformly betrayed. America and the world are now watching Saddam Hussein closely. Any act of delay or defiance will indicate that he is taking the path of deception once again. And this time, the consequences would be severe. Our goal is not merely the return of inspectors to Iraq. Our goal is the full disarmament of Iraq – proven by the regime itself. The dictator of Iraq will fully disarm, or the United States will lead a coalition to disarm him.

Our war against terrorists and their supporters is advancing on all fronts. We are moving aggressively to protect our people, and to oppose a great threat to the peace of the world.

Thank you for listening.

Thanksgiving Radio Taping for NFL Games
November 15, 2002 [taping for November 28]
Draft #5

Good afternoon.

Today Americans gather with family and friends to give thanks for the many blessings in our lives. Even with all our challenges, we are so fortunate to be Americans. And since our Nation was attacked, we have been reminded that freedom and life are precious, and must be defended.

Every day, in far corners of the world, members of our military protect the lives and the freedom of the American people. On Thanksgiving Day, many officers and enlisted personnel serving overseas feel a little bit closer to home by listening to today's games. Your fellow citizens are thinking of you today. On behalf of all Americans, I thank you for your service and your sacrifice. You believe deeply in America, and America believes in you.

As we give thanks today, we also remember those who struggle – our fellow Americans who need food, clothing, shelter, hope, or a kind word from a caring neighbor. In the spirit of the first Thanksgiving, I ask all Americans to extend a helping hand to neighbors in need – and to make this a season of service. With each American who finds a reason to give thanks today, our Nation grows stronger and better.

May God bless you and your family on Thanksgiving and throughout the holiday season. And may God continue to bless the United States of America.

Video Taping: Opening of the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library
November 15, 2002
Draft #4

Good afternoon. I am honored to participate in the official opening of the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library. Abraham Lincoln spent his early public life in Springfield. When he left this town, he thanked the people of Springfield for shaping so much of his life. The values Lincoln found here would guide him and our Nation through dark hours of war and struggle.

In our own time, we too are engaged in a great struggle to defend freedom. We look to President Lincoln's words and deeds for guidance and inspiration. We remember his love of country and his patient determination to see the conflict through to its end. We remember Lincoln's moral resolve, in challenging the terrible evil of slavery. And we remember Lincoln's compassion, in treating former enemies with respect.

In our current conflict against the evil of terrorism, Americans are acting with resolve, with justice, and with compassion worthy of Lincoln's example. We have confronted unspeakable evil, liberated a nation, and defended our freedom.

Every generation faces its own challenges, and every generation should study the life and character of Abraham Lincoln. I am pleased that this new library will welcome scholars who will deepen our understanding of Abraham Lincoln and his times. And I am pleased that students will have a new resource equipped with the latest technology for learning about one of our greatest Presidents.

Thank you for your commitment to advancing the Lincoln legacy. Through your hard work, dedication, and civic spirit, Lincoln's devotion to our highest ideals will inspire Americans for ages to come.

Congratulations on completing this important work. God bless you all, and may God continue to bless the United States of America.
