Video Taping: Texas Parks and Wildlife Foundation
Tuesday, September 27, 2005
Draft #6

Good evening. Thank you for inviting me back to join you¹ for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Expo Conservation Banquet. As a hunter and fisherman, I share your love for the great outdoors, and your commitment to conservation. And I am proud to see that Texas is again leading the way for the country.

I remember attending your banquet in 1998 – and since then you have continued to do vital work for the people of Texas. You have a fine leader in Commissioner John Parker, and a superb Governor in my friend Rick Perry. I appreciate Lt. Governor David Dewhurst, Speaker of the House Tom Craddick, Agriculture Commissioner Susan Combs and Sen. John Cornyn. They are all doing a great job on your behalf. And I thank Billy and Reagan Gammon for your strong commitment to helping the environment. All of you have given your time and energy to preserving Texas's natural treasures – and I appreciate the example you set for your fellow Texans.

Austin

In the past few weeks, many of you have also extended a helping hand to neighbors who were hit by Hurricane Katrina and Hurricane Rita. Texas Game Wardens were among the first responders to the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina in Louisiana, and their rescue efforts brought relief to people in desperate need. Following Hurricane Rita, you have again joined our armies of compassion to help citizens across the Gulf Coast – and our Nation is grateful.

This spirit of volunteerism is one of our Nation's most important tools for protecting our environment. Stewardship is a personal responsibility – and a public value. And today, Americans of all backgrounds share a conviction that a healthy environment requires concerted action from government, conservation groups, and private citizens. Through Cooperative Conservation programs across the country, we are fulfilling a duty to work together on behalf of our environment and natural resources.

The Foundation's work has created an exceptional partnership between the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, businesses, and private citizens. You have set an example for other states to follow. The World Birding Center has become one of the premier birding facilities in the country. Your efforts on behalf of land conservation have helped the Parks Department acquire thousands of acres across the state for protection as natural areas. Under the KidFish program, you have helped give urban children the chance to fish and learn about the aquatic ecosystem. And I appreciate your work to enhance the San Jacinto Battleground as a state historic site.

Monument &

My Administration has also made environmental stewardship a priority – and we have achieved results. Today our air is cleaner ... our water is purer ... and our land is better protected than it was four years ago. We continue to build on that progress. Thanks to the Healthy Forests Restoration Act that I signed in 2003, we are helping to protect our forests from catastrophic fires. Three years ago, I signed a farm bill that doubled funding for conservation programs to 40 billion dollars over a decade, so that we can restore grasslands, protect habitats, conserve water, and improve streams and rivers near working farms and ranches. We are making our national parks more accessible and inviting – and we will meet our pledge to spend 4.9 billion dollars over five years for maintenance projects in the parks. And we are working to protect our wetlands: I have set a goal of restoring, improving, and protecting at least three million wetland acres by 2009 – and we are on track to meet that goal.

By working together, we will live up to our responsibilities to be good caretakers of the earth. And by conserving our natural resources, we will ensure that the land and waterways of the great state of Texas – and across our Nation – are available for the enjoyment of generations to come.

Thank you.
