Subject: Speaking engagement at U.S. Dept. Of Transportation

Ms. Bennett,

As we discussed, I am emailing some background information about our Transportation Executive Leadership Institute which will be officially announced on December 19th, 2001 from 10:00 a.m.- 11:00 a.m. I've also attached a copy of the letter announcing the event to give you an idea about the theme.

You mentioned that I should follow up with you approximately 10 days before the event to ensure Secretary Card's availability. Again, I understand that his plans could change over night, but we are optimistic that he will be able to speak to our DOT executives and flag officers. Thank you for making the arrangements. I will contact you next week.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION
EXECUTIVE LEADERSHIP INSTITUTE
SYNOPSIS

MISSION STATEMENT

Advance and shape the continuous learning and development of the U. S. Department of Transportation (DOT) senior executives, managers and their equivalents.

WHAT IS THE EXECUTIVE LEADERSHIP INSTITUTE (TELI)

- The overarching charge of the TELI is to offer learning activities that clarify the business purposes, values, and desired outcomes of DOT.
- The focus of TELI is to develop leadership competencies consistent with organizational business needs and OPM's Executive Core Qualifications (ECQs).
- In addition, the TELI curriculum provides the corporate leadership of the Department with a common experience base for addressing the future direction of the Department.

STRUCTURE:

- TELI is a virtual institute, headquartered in Washington, using extensive educational resources that draw up the Department, academia, and other Federal agencies.
- A group of the high-ranking executives, including career senior executives and Flag officers, serve as the "board of directors" or Advisory Board appointed by the Secretary of Transportation. This Board approves funding and provides guidance and direction for the TELI. The Board meets periodically to review TELI status, and discuss mutual areas of interest and concern.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES:

- The core of TELI is a set of leadership experiences, developed to provide a common vision and competencies and to explore issues facing the Department as a whole that all members of the executive leadership must participate in.
- DOT executives/leaders are required to participate in formal development of their individual competencies and will be held accountable for their attendance within a set period of time.
- TELI foundation will be built on organizational and individual assessments that are linked to the organization's desired outcomes and consistent with OPM's ECQs.
- Leaders are expected to leave the developmental experience with a defined series of actions to undertake. That is, leaders need to leave the developmental experience with ways to measure progress in selected areas.
- Tailored skill-building activities are targeted specifically to an individual's needs, based on personalized data collection such as 360-degree feedback.
- Action-learning projects are created in which participants tackle real and important issues DOT faces and in which they take some role in implementing their recommendations.
- Tools and mechanisms are developed for follow-up and for holding people accountable.

By following these principles and building this type of infrastructure, DOT activates a new way of approaching leadership development. In the future, DOT will align their leaders to organizational outcomes and then determine what competencies are needed to deliver on those explicit results.

CURRICULUM (Below are a few examples that are currently under consideration. The curriculum will be expanded over time.)

Collaborative Activities

- At the top of the curriculum infrastructure are collaborative core learning activities for which executive/leaders earn continuing leadership units. Examples of these learning activities are:
  - DOT Leadership Conferences
  - Transportation Issues Seminars
  - Management Issues Seminars
  - DOT capstone course (to be developed)

Rotational Assignments/Sabbaticals

- These assignments include:
  - Intermodal Rotational Assignments
  - Special Project Teams
  - Intergovernmental Mobility Assignments

Formal Classroom Training

- Executive/managerial formal classroom training currently offered through various DOT training entities, academia and other non-federal sources including USCG Academy, U.S. Maritime Academy, FAA's Center for Management Development, FHWA Institutes, University Transportation Centers, Federal Executive Institute, Management Development Centers, SES Forum Series, and others are also included as leadership experiences. Participants may also earn continuing leadership units for attending activities conducted at some of these training entities.

Learning Activities

- Leaders are encouraged to participate in, and take advantage of, activities such as:
  - Mentoring
  - Shadowing
  - Networking
  - Coaching
  - Professional Associations
  - Reading lists
  - Web-based learning

Organizational/Individual Assessments

- Agencies utilize assessment tools to determine appropriate developmental needs for leadership development.

INFORMATION: Secretary Mineta Addresses
The Department Executives and Flag Officers

Melissa J. Allen
Assistant Secretary for Administration

Departmental Officers
Heads of Operating Administrations
Director, Bureau of Transportation Statistics
Director, Transportation Administrative Service Center
Chairman, Surface Transportation Board

On Wednesday, December 19, 2001, all Department of Transportation executives and flag officers are encouraged to attend a briefing where Secretary Mineta will share his views on leadership and the extraordinary demands placed on all our leaders at this time. The White House Chief of Staff, Andrew Card, has also been invited to speak. This event will be held in the Nassif Building, Room 2230 from 10:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.

This is the first of several Transportation Executive Institute (TELI) planned activities for FY 2002. TELI is designed to advance and shape the continuous learning and development of DOT's senior executives, managers and their equivalents. The overarching charge of TELI is to offer learning activities that clarify the business purposes, values, and desired outcomes of DOT.

Please ensure all Headquarters executives and flag officers are aware of this event and plan to attend. If you have any questions or wish further information, please contact Randy Bergquist, Departmental Program Manager for Learning and Development on 202-366-6016.

Re: Formal Request for Interview

Dear Secretary Card,

My name is Trent Haynes and I work for Directions Incorporated, a video and staging company just Northwest of Chicago. One of our clients is The National Automobile Dealers Association in Washington, D.C.

Phil Brady was recently selected as NADA's President and he will be recognized by NADA with a video at its upcoming convention in New Orleans this January. NADA asked us to contact friends and colleagues of Phil's to do short interviews for the tribute video...4 to 6 questions. Phil recommended that we contact you because of your friendship and long term relationship.

We, of course, would work with you and your staff on any scheduling requirements or logistics necessary to make it as convenient for you as possible.

I appreciate your time and look forward to your response. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Trent Haynes

Paid for by Randy Forbes for Congress

WASHINGTON -- President Bush's new political strategy looks a lot like his war plan in Afghanistan: clearly define the objective -- electing Republicans in 2002, in this case -- and use stealthy tactics to accomplish it.

While he has sworn off fund-raisers since the Sept. 11 attacks, Mr. Bush has freed up top administration officials, including Vice President Dick Cheney, to raise money for GOP lawmakers in little-publicized events. The president's aides also are calling in lawmakers to discuss what political assistance they need from the White House. And aides are working closely with corporate donors on issues such as tax cuts and terrorism insurance to keep them in a giving mood for next year's midterm congressional elections.

Mr. Bush's decision to keep his political activity under the radar is one of the many ways the terrorist attacks changed his presidency. "There was a natural period when no one was interested in talking politics. But they are beginning to do more at this time," said Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott (R., Miss.). On Tuesday, Mr. Cheney left his "undisclosed secure location" to headline an event at the Willard Hotel here for Mr. Lott's political-action committee that benefits GOP candidates.

1 What are the GOP's chances of retaining control of the House in next year's midterm elections? Participate in the Question of the Day.

Mr. Cheney will have lunch Friday with the party's top professional fund-raisers, and will host a fund-raiser for House Majority Leader Richard Armey (R., Texas) in Dallas later this year. "He's beginning to fulfill our pre-9/11 commitments in a low-key way," says Mary Matalin, a top aide to the vice president.

Mr. Bush, for his part, has been careful to avoid seeming concerned about politics during wartime. And most Republicans believe winning the war in Afghanistan is the best thing he can do for them. "What could be better for a freshman representative who has a military background and who's probably going to be heavily targeted in the next cycle?" says freshman Rep. Rob Simmons (R., Conn.), who fits that description to a tee.

Private Complaints

But some Republicans complain privately that the president isn't giving much attention to House Republicans, his staunchest allies, especially when it comes to raising money and playing down issues that could backfire during the elections -- such as a Social Security overhaul.

They worry that Mr. Bush's most public gestures since Sept. 11 have been too limited, such as signing letters encouraging people to vote for Republicans, such as Rep. John Boozman of Arkansas, who won a special election just a week ago.

Mr. Bush has plenty of incentive to help out, as he endorses his own possible re-election bid in 2004 and the narrow margins in the Senate and House. Democrats are likely to hold or expand their one-seat advantage in the Senate, but not to pick up the six seats they likely would need to capture control of the House. But Republicans probably won't get the major boost they once anticipated from the once-a-decade redrawing of congressional districts, so control of the House is very much up for grabs.

Trying to appear to be above the fray, the president has relied on his inner circle, including his father, former President George H.W. Bush, to host a number of fund-raisers.

Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson recently took time away from the anthrax investigation to fly to Illinois to help raise almost $200,000 for House Speaker Dennis Hastert, an Illinois Republican. Karl Rove, the president's top political adviser, has helped raise money for the New Jersey branch of the GOP and is expected to appear at events for a number of House Republicans facing tough re-election campaigns in coming months. On Tuesday, White House Chief of Staff Andrew Card will be featured at a $2,500-a-plate dinner for GOP Rep. Randy Forbes of Virginia.

The White House is closely tracking its fund raising; in recent meetings, aides have boasted that administration officials have attended more than 75 political events so far this year.

Resuming Funding Role

President Bush likely will resume his fund-raiser-in-chief role sometime next year, aides said, perhaps at an early January event for his brother, Florida Gov. Jeb Bush. The president refused to do public events for gubernatorial candidates in New Jersey and Virginia, both of whom lost races earlier this month.
