Presidential Action – Tuesday, September 11

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children. School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package.

The President supports increased funding for education – he gave the Department of Education an 11.5% increase and he tripled funding for reading programs. But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Increased funding must be coupled with real reforms that hold schools accountable, increase flexibility and expand parental options.

Alarming Statistics the President Will Discuss Today

Every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

- 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
- Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
- More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

The President's Initiative to Improve Reading Scores

Today's Presidential Action:

- Today the President will visit Emma Booker Elementary School in Sarasota, Florida, where he will point out that every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:
 - 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
 - Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
 - More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
 - Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
 - Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
 - Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.
- Increased funding for education is a top priority of the President. He has proposed a $4.6 billion (11.5%) increase in funding for the Department of Education, including a tripling of funding for reading instruction as part of his Reading First initiative.
 - But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Governments spent $231 billion in combined expenditures on public education at the local, state, and federal level during the 1983-1984 school year (inflation-adjusted figure), and the average nine year-old received a score of 211 on the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) reading exam. During the 1998-1999 school year, more than $388 billion was spent at the local, state, and federal level -- a 68% increase over 1983-1984 -- and the average NAEP reading score among nine year-olds was 212. In other words, despite substantial funding increases, reading scores remained flat.
 - More resources must be coupled with real reforms that focus on results for our nation's schoolchildren. Students at schools like Emma Booker Elementary School stand to gain the most from passage of the President's education reform bill -- and have the most to lose from unnecessary delay. Most children at Emma Booker come from lower-income, minority background. Nationwide, almost 70% of urban and inner city 4th graders cannot read at a basic level.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First:

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms. The President has two key reading initiatives.
 - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.
 - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

For more information on the President's initiatives please visit www.whitehouse.gov

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.
- Yesterday, in Jacksonville, the President announced two new initiatives from the Department of Education to assist parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:
 - Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.
 - “Put Reading First” Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.
- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.
- If Congress acts soon on the education bill, these important reading initiatives can be in place for America's school children when the next school year begins.
